Flu Epidemic Due to Reach Peak Tonight; 100,000 Ill

Disease Retarded By Cold, Humidity; Nurses Stricken; Schools Kept Open

The peak in the flu epidemic that is sweeping the Washington metropolitan area, and which jumped from 90,000 cases on Friday to an estimated 100,000 over the weekend, is expected to be reached by tonight acording to Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

He said he felt the number of cases would begin to show a decrease due to the fact yesterday was the twelfth day of the epidemic and that during 1918 the epidemic "broke" on the eighth day.

Dr. Ruhland said the cold snap over the weekend, with subfreezing temperatures and low humidities, would have a retarding effect but not because the cold kills germs. He said the germs "cannot be frozen out" and that a curtailment of the spread of the virus would be attributable to the cold weather keeping people home and in less contact with others. The spread of the ailment, he said, "is from one person to another."

Meanwhile, it was learned, many nurses at the various District hospitals have become ill, cutting down the number available to give aid to the thousands of additional cases needing treatment.

School officials did not plan to close schools, although absenteeism among students will close to 30 per cent.

Police Force Hit

A total of 164 out of approximately 1900 policemen were on the sick list, roughly 9 per cent of the total of all police bureaus. Hardest hit precincts were Nos. 2, 3, 5, 7, 10 and 13, the illnesses on the force being scattered throughout the city and not confined to the downtown sections.

Only police unit to escape the epidemic thus far has been the Harbor Patrol, which has reported no casualties. Park police listed 2, the Traffic Squad 16 and Detective Bureau 7.

Cleansing Tissue Stocks Vanish In Flu Epidemic

The influenza epidemic and the paper shortage have resulted in a scarcity of cleansing tissues on sale in Washington.

A survey of all the chain drug stores and others scattered throughout the city disclosed yesterday that a majority of them are entirely out of the commodity. Those which still have stocks on hand are selling little-known brands as substitutes for the depleted popular brands. Pharmacists with meager supplies are limiting one box to each customer, they said.

A representative of one chain store here explained "Jobbers are unable to sell us cleansing tissues because of the paper shortage and I understand that 85 per cent of the drug stores throughout the country are entirely out. Then the flu epidemic of the past week caused a rush on the scanty stocks available."

One spokesman added that his wholesale trade had made it possible for him to store a supply. Another store of this chain, which had been obtaining 60 cartons, three dozen to each carton, a year ago, is now receiving only two cartons a week and "are glad to get it," it was said.

'A Slack,' Singular, Says WPB, but It Looks the Same

That's a slack you're wearing, sister—not slacks.

Handing out a couple of new definitions yesterday, the War Production Board let the "s" remain on trousers, but insisted that the garment favored by some women defense workers and others is a slack.

An order affecting the garment industry held that "a slack may be sold with a blouse at a unit price."

WPB also defined a play suit as shorts with the top hitched or unhitched to the pants.

'Politics Can Wait—Food Can't'

Jones Urges Speedy Action On Subsidies, Opposes Recess

By the Associated Press

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones appealed to Congress last night for quick action on the subsidy question, declaring that "politics can wait, food can't."

It was Jones' second plea, timed to counter efforts to hurry Congress into a holiday recess and postpone a vote on the antisubsidy legislation until February. Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, had said he would introduce resolutions today for such a delay.

Jones said the subsidy fight had "clouded" other needs of the farmer such as machinery, parts, labor and feed, and added:

"The farmer will produce if we see that he gets the tools and then get out of his way. We continue this fight for months while production waits. The farmer needs to know now so that his production plans can be made."

Jones said he wanted "selective" subsidies continued and also would like "the chance to continue the use of a support price to assure the producer through the planting, harvesting and marketing season against the added hazards and risks of expanded production."

The subsidy ban which once before got through Congress only to be vetoed, is contained in a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corp., the financing agency, which expires December 31. Backers of subsidies contend that the Government cash payments to processors have kept retail prices down and hence warded off inflation. Opponents say the payments themselves are inflationary.

The move of the antisubsidy bloc was part of a triple legislative assault on the Administration's price and wage stabilization program which shaped up swiftly yesterday.

The battle over subsidies and wages and a move to erase authority of the Office of Price Administration over coal and oil prices, shared congressional attention with a legislative drive to provide a financial cushion soon for the return of war veterans to civil life.

Ellender said he would introduce resolutions today asking the Senate to "recess as soon as possible until January 10" and to postpone its subsidy decision until early February, keeping the Commodity Credit Corporation alive meanwhile with temporary finance.

Weather Gets 2d Wind for New Nose-Dive

Dip to 10-15 Degrees Expected Tonight; Snow in Maryland

Don't be fooled by that "mild" weather yesterday afternoon after Saturday night's lowest temperature of the season, for the thermometer is expected to dip to a new low today, sliding down to between 10 and 15 degrees above zero tonight.

Early yesterday morning the temperature dropped to 24 degrees, recorded at 2:46 a. m., but bounced up to 51 degrees at 3:50 p. m. The latter was 5 degrees above the normal maximum and the day's average temperature was normal in comparison with corresponding dates of previous years.

The Weather Bureau predicted that the thermometer will move counter to its usual daytime trend, descending during today from last night's expected low of 20 degrees. Although today will be fair, strong winds similar to those which ushered in the cold wave Saturday are expected to accompany the falling temperature.

Yesterday's humidity ranged between 40 and 60, as compared with the 70 and 80 percentages of the summer. The dry air afforded better breathing, an aid to curtailment of the spread of the flu epidemic.

Meanwhile, in Maryland there were snow flurries in the mountains and it was predicted they would continue today. Near-zero was forecast for most of the State today.

12 Dead in Cold Wave

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—The season's first severe cold wave, which resulted in a weekend known death toll of 12 in Atlantic coastal States, moderated today, but Weather Bureau officials predicted the respite would be short with near-zero temperatures, high winds, and snow flurries forecast for coastal areas tonight and tomorrow.

Temperatures which dipped last night to 15 degrees below zero in some sections of New England and to just below freezing in the upper South, climbed into the mid-30's today.

Military Men Ruled Eligible For Politics

Stand Directly Affects MacArthur, Lieut. Comdr. Stassen

By the Associated Press

Senate circles, where many a presidential star has risen and fallen, buzzed anew yesterday with Republican candidate talk that stemmed from these developments:

1. Senate Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan obtained from the War and Navy Departments the statement that none of their regulations bars an officer from nomination or election to political office.

2. Friends of Wendell L. Willkie said he would place some explosive countercharges before the Senate if he testifies in an investigation of charges that Willkie forces sought to "buy" his nomination at the 1940 GOP convention in Philadelphia.

Vandenberg asked the services for the ruling, which directly affects such men as Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Lieut. Comdr. Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota. The Michigan Senator has urged the GOP draft MacArthur for the nomination. Stassen's name will be placed before the voters in the Nebraska preferential primary though his friends say he has no personal connection with the move.

Vandenberg asked Secretary of War Stimson and Navy Secretary

Giants Win, 31-7; Play-Off in N. Y.

The New York Giants hung a 31-7 beating on the Redskins yesterday in Griffith Stadium and tied for the Eastern Division title. The playoff game will be held next Sunday in New York's Polo Grounds and the winner will play the Chicago Bears for the National Football League championship December 26 in Chicago.

Ward Cuff scored 13 points on a 20-yard touchdown run, a field goal and four extra points as the Giants came back to score the last 31 points after spotting the Redskins an early 7-0 lead on a Sam Baugh to Joe Aguirre touchdown pass. Giant rookie Bill Paschal won the league's ground-gaining championship by one yard.

Sen. Wherry's Plan

Rationing of Liquor by OPA Urged to Curb Sales Abuses

By the Associated Press

Senator Wherry (Republican) of Nebraska recommended yesterday that the OPA take over supervision of liquor distribution on a nation-wide basis to break up shortage and black markets.

He suggested a quota allotment system as a means of assuring an even spread of liquor stocks. The system, he said, would stop under-the-counter sales and ceiling price violations.

"The way to control prices and prevent black markets is through the orderly merchandising of goods," said Wherry, member of a Senate committee investigating the liquor situation.

"Enforced associations of goods would force liquor supplies to go through regular dealers, assuring the average person of his share of the available stock."

Senator Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia, advocate of Nation-wide retail liquor rationing, said he might offer legislation to establish Government control in Washington "so Congress can keep an eye on the liquor business all the way from warehouses to the consumer and see just how it operates."

One complaint has been that black markets have withheld liquor from monopoly States and shipped it on to open market areas where it can demand above-ceiling prices.

Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana said he hoped the committee could solve the shortage without recommending Nation-wide consumer rationing.

"If we can reach some of our objectives, such as cutting the maximum tax-exempt storage in warehouses from eight to four years and getting distillers a respite in war alcohol making to manufacture whisky, I believe we can avoid rationing," he said.

Battleships Aided Attack On Nauru

Nine Jap Planes Blasted on Ground Regarded as Showing Move Surprised Foe

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 12 (AP).—American battleships joined in shelling Nauru, Japan's most southerly outpost, in the attack last Wednesday by carrier-born bombers and surface forces, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz disclosed today.

The target area was well covered by bomb bursts and shellfire, starting many fires. Ten Japanese planes were destroyed, nine of them on the ground.

Two United States planes were lost and one destroyer suffered minor damage from the only hit scored by shore batteries.

The fact that nine planes were destroyed on the ground indicated the defending forces were taken by surprise, as they were in the raid only four days previously by the same forces on Marshall Island strongholds, 800 miles to the north.

Another indication of surprise at Nauru was the fact that our ships were able to get close enough for a destroyer to be hit from shore.

Repeated bombardment of the former British owned phosphate producing island was taken to mean that the United States is softening up the little island to make it useless to Japan.

The position of Nauru near the head of a long corridor between the Japanese-held Caroline Islands and Melanesia, makes it a valuable outpost for the Japanese in the early spotting of any invasion fleet that the United Nations might send out from the Gilbert Islands toward the Philippines. This pathway between Japan strongholds has been suggested as one of the most likely routes for carrying the American flag back to the Philippines.

The fact that only one Jap fighter got into the air suggested that the two aircraft we lost were shot down by antiaircraft fire. Fleet spokesmen intimated that whatever air power the enemy has on the little island is light, and certainly not intended to combat such a heavy attacking force as was thrown at it last Wednesday.

1 Reported Dead, 20 Hurt in Wreck Of Seaboard Train

Seals, Ga., Dec. 12 (AP).—One person was reported killed and about 20 injured tonight in a derailment of the Seaboard Air Line's crack northbound passenger train, the Sun Queen, near a pass switch 24 miles north of here.

The first reports from the scene were that six day coaches overturned and all the other coaches were derailed and remained upright.

The dead man was described as an unidentified soldier. The injured were taken to hospitals at Brunswick, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla. Of nine taken to Brunswick, three were reported in a serious condition. Names of the injured were not immediately available.

Red Army Lashes Back In Kiev Area

Retakes Hamlets In Counterattack, Captures Chigrin In Southern Sector

London (Monday), Dec. 13 (AP).—Russian defense forces, rallying in one of the mightiest continuing tank battles of the war, have lashed out against attacking German forces pounding for Kiev and have retaken several hamlets, killing 1600 Germans and wrecking 35 tanks, Moscow announced today.

The fighting south and southwest of the town of Malin, about 55 miles west of Kiev, continued with unabated violence, Tass reported in a Moscow broadcast.

Two hundred miles to the south, the Russians announced they had captured the town of Chigrin at the northern end of their Kremenchug bridgehead and captured eight more populated places in their drive for the industrial town of Kirovograd, 15 miles west of Russian advance guards. They were also reported fighting in the streets of Cherkasy, 35 miles further north.

The Moscow midnight communique gave new details of the battle for the Kiev bulge as German Field Marshal Gen. Fritz von Mannstein tried vainly for a breakthrough with almost 2000 tanks and many divisions of infantry.

Fighting Placed Near Teterev

German broadcasts placed the fighting as near the Teterev River, which joins the Dnieper north of Kiev and reaches to Zhitomir. It is about 45 miles west of Kiev in the Malin area and 10 miles east of Malin itself. The German radio said strong Soviet counterthrusts supported by tanks continued despite losses, but that a Soviet bridgehead on the western bank of the Teterev had been wiped out.

The weather was unfavorable in the Dnieper bend. The Russians announced, however, they had won the town of Chigrin, wiped out its German garrison and captured prisoners and stores of material. To the south, in the Kirovograd direction, they forced additional German retreats.

The fighting in the Kiev bulge, where the Germans had flung all their resources into a test of their offensive power on the Eastern Front, has cost the Russians approximately 25 miles of their westward gains, but Red defenses appeared to be stiffening.

London expected this battle soon to reach a climax. Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's reserves and deep defenses appeared to have dulled German striking power. A staff commentator in Moscow said "protracted battles are the first sign of failure in any major tank operation."

More than 300 German tanks were knocked out in this sector alone last week and the Germans, significantly, have been extremely cautious in their announcements of progress in this area.

Cherkasy had been by-passed when the Russians forged a bridgehead across the Dnieper in this area, driving to within a few miles of the rail junction of Smela. When the two bridgeheads from Cherkasy and Kremenchug are joined, another important por-

Both Ends of the Line

Fifth and Eighth Armies Stop Savage Nazi Counterattacks

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Dec. 12 (AP).—Savage German counterattacks were smashed back yesterday at both ends of the Allied line in Italy, Allied headquarters announced today, with British artillery taking heavy toll especially of tank-led Nazi assault troops along the Adriatic.

The fierce German recoil brought the Eighth Army advance toward Pescara and Chieti to a virtual standstill, but Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's troops managed to extend their Moro River bridgehead in the San Leonardo area, battlefront advices said.

In one area, an Eighth Army battalion buried 200 enemy dead strewn over ground from which the Germans had been dislodged.

The enemy lunged out also on the Fifth Army front to the west, attempting especially to recover a height a mile west of Filignano. German infantry charged after a heavy artillery and mortar barrage, but American troops threw them back.

Farther south, in the Mount Samuero sector, northeast of Mignano, another German counterattack early in the morning was broken up by Allied artillery.

A British radio broadcast recorded by CBS said today the Germans had announced evacuation "some time ago" of Mignano, stronghold on the Fifth Army front in Italy that had been nearly isolated by Allied seizure of sur-

Nazis 'Surrender,' Others Slaughter Canadians

With the Canadians in Italy, Dec. 11 (Delayed) (AP).—An entire Canadian infantry platoon was declared in an official message today to have been "murdered in cold blood" by Nazi machine-gunners from ambush when it moved forward to accept the surrender of a group of German riflemen.

The Germans had put up a stiff battle north of San Leonardo Friday, but eventually raised their arms. When the Canadians went forward to round up the Germans a withering machine-gun fire from the flank killed them all.

Bombers Blast Supply Centers In East Indies

Yanks Beat Back Jap Counterattack On Bougainville

By C. Yates McDaniel

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Monday), December 13 (AP).—Sharp but localized clashes featured the fighting on ground sectors of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command in the past three days, while Liberator bombers made long over-water hops northwest of Australia to blast the Japanese oil and supply centers in occupied Netherlands East Indies.

American troops beat off a sharp enemy counterattack on the northeast sector of Empress Augusta Bay, Bougainville Island, in the Solomons, Thursday, Marines and soldiers have expanded their holdings here and established an air strip, since initial seizing of a beachhead November 1.

Australian infantry supported by tanks and artillery pushed a mile up the coast of the Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, against stiff opposition. Inland and to the northwest, the Ramu River Valley, Australian cavalry and infantry patrols fanned out and met the Japanese in several sharp clashes Saturday, a communique said.

This was the first mention of the use of cavalry in the fighting in this sector, but a headquarters spokesman said mounted units had been operating in the Ramu Valley for some time, increasing the range and mobility of Allied troops.

The long bomber flights were made to Balikpapan, on the southeast coast of Borneo, to attack oil refineries. Large fires were set in plant and storage tank areas. This flight was a 2600-mile round trip to give Balikpapan its third pasting.

Liberators also flew a 2400-mile round trip to hit the harbor area at Macassar, on the southwest peninsula of Celebes Island. This attack, the fifth here, resulted in fires among wharves.

The Japanese sent 40 fighter planes over Ramu valley Friday but they were driven away by a greatly outnumbered force of Allied Kitty Hawk fighters.

Other Allied air action was directed again against New Britain Island, where medium bombers dropped 25 tons of explosives in the Borgen Bay area, on the north coast.

Fleeing Japs Clog Road From Changteh

Chinese Fliers Strafe Foe in Closing Phase Of Major Victory

By Spencer Moosa

Chungking, Dec. 12 (AP).—A retreating Japanese army clogged the winding escape road northeast from Changteh today, bombed and strafed by Chinese planes in the closing phase of what appeared to be one of China's greatest victories.

Independent reports confirmed the Chinese assertion that the savage battle which raged for 40 days in the "rice bowl" area of battered and recaptured Changteh was the bittarest since the 92-day struggle for Shanghai in 1937.

Local engagements were reported still under way north and northeast of Changteh, where Japanese forces were counterattacking at points 20 and 45 miles from the city, but a Chinese communique said that remnants of the enemy forces had been mopped up for a distance more than 13 miles northeast of the city, the direction in which the main forces appeared to be retreating.

Food Belt Threat Eased

As this threat to one of China's richest food belts and to the provincial Hunan capital of Changsha eased, at least temporarily, speculation here turned to yesterday's Chinese high command announcement that a Chinese force had driven to within 30 miles of the great enemy base of Hankow, the heart of the Japanese-dominated area.

Today's communique did not mention the column which was reported to have struck out in Hankow's direction last week, and it was not clear here whether the drive was part of a diversionary movement or had special significance.

Tokyo Radio Tells of Raids

There was some speculation the Chinese may attempt to retake the great base as part of general Allied strategy.

Strengthening this belief, yesterday's communique from the United States Fourteenth Air Force said American bombers had attacked Hankow Thursday night.

(A Tokyo broadcast said that both Hankow and Hanoi, in Indo-China, were raided again today by American planes. The Tokyo

Units Ready For Service In Europe Or Africa

News of First Latin-American Overseas Action Told in Algiers

Algiers, Dec. 12 (AP).—Gen. Mascarenhas de Morais of the Brazilian general staff announced today that Brazil is sending ground forces and air force units to serve with Allied troops in Europe or Africa.

General Mascarenhas heads a party of 13 Brazilian officers who conferred at Allied force headquarters preliminary to the dispatch of the first expeditionary force ever sent overseas from a Latin American republic.

The ultimate destination, date of departure or arrival and the size and composition of the Brazilian force were not disclosed.

Mascarenhas, who holds a rank comparable to major general in the American Army, is going to Brazil soon to take command, and return with a large unit of the expeditionary force.

Up to Allied Leader

He said that where the Brazilians went into action would depend on the Allied commander in chief under whose orders they are to be placed.

The Brazilian force will be as a separate unit, with Brazilian officers under Brazilian colors. Their disposition will depend on the Allied commander, Mascarenhas said, but pressed for an answer as to whether they would be ready to see action, he shrugged:

"The conclusion is obvious."

Mascarenhas, who was accompanied by Gen. Anor Texeira Doassantos of the War Minister's office; Col. Vasco Secco of the air force and Maj. Gen. J. G. Ord, American chairman of the Joint Brazil-United States Defense Commission, said Brazilians were eager to do their share toward defeat of the Axis.

"Brazil, in view of her agreements, has turned toward war spontaneously, and so has the army," he said, as Ord added praise for the units he had watched in training.

Reconnaissance Party

The group was described officially as an advance reconnaissance party of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force. It arrived in Algiers shortly after the announcement in Brazil several weeks ago that the country was ready to send forces to participate in the war.

Mascarenhas said Brazil did not yet have an agreement with the French National Committee permitting Brazilians to enter French territory, but said if it was necessary to reach such an agreement, it would be done.

The party lunched with Maj. Gen. Walter B. Smith, chief of staff at Allied headquarters, then paid its respects to Gen. Henri Giraud as commander in chief of French forces.

"We have great affection for the French army because of the long stay in Brazil of the French mission. Thanks to that mission we have a body of troops with a high degree of proficiency in military science," Mascarenhas said, re-

Nosy Doctors Overlook Soldier's Rubber Schnozzle

Algiers, Dec. 12 (AP).—Twenty doctors examined a British soldier for physical defects, some suggesting this and some that, but all overlooked the fact that he has a rubber nose.

The young trooper lost the original in Italy when a shell exploded. He became the first patient in a laboratory at the University of Algiers where Capt. Cary D. Clarke of Baltimore, formerly of the University of Maryland Medical School in Baltimore, and a technical staff are making artificial noses, ears, jaws, hands and arms for maimed soldiers.

Now the Briton has not only one rubber nose but three—all of varying shades to match seasonal changes of skin coloration.

4000 Places in D. C. Affected

New Rule of WMC to Require Approval to Hire Men, 18 to 38

Washington's 4000 "locally needed" establishments, whose labor is restricted in its movements by War Manpower Commission regulations, will have to get special permission from the United States Employment Service to hire men between the ages of 18 and 38 after January 31, it was announced yesterday at area WMC headquarters.

In further explanstions of their present move to force all establishments to comply with WMC standards before they can claim protection and help from the WMC machinery, officials pointed out that the previous national order, covering hiring of men between 18 and 44, has been amended here to cover the actual draft-age group.

Jack A. Serber, area labor analyst, said that conferences with various trade associations are already underway to determine the standards regarding employment of women and minorities, cutting out of luxury services.

Since all establishments that want to be classified as "locally needed" have to answer a questionnaire by January 31, the WMC will then be in a position to compare the set standards with those of the individual enterprise in determining its status.

Serber predicted that the efficient working of the program will probably lead to establishment of "employment ceilings" for those industries.

After their status has been determined, these establishments will continue getting first call on the labor supply by the USES and their existing labor force will remain "frozen" on the job.

Locally needed activities include the District's 40 hotels, some 300 apartment and office buildings, an undetermined number of food and fuel distributors, more than 2500 restaurants and cafeterias, 400 boarding houses, and about 50 laundries, linen supply and dry cleaning establishments.

These figures are taken from WMC official estimates.

Browder Wants Roosevelt Again

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 12 (AP). Earl Browder declared here tonight at a Communist Party convention that "the voters of America should cry out in clear and loud voices to force President Roosevelt to run for a fourth term in 1944."

"The only important issue of the 1944 campaign," said the general secretary of the Communist Party, "will be the question of the support of the Teheran Declaration."

New Raids Indicated

Western Germany Pounded By RAF Bombers Without Loss

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—RAF Mosquito bombers raided western Germany last night without loss, carrying forward the aerial offensive against the Reich in which American heavy bombers on Saturday smashed at Emden and downed 138 Nazi fighters of all descriptions in a brilliant sky battle.

(Continental radio stations shut down tonight, suggesting new attacks.)

The specific targets of the Mosquitoes were not named in the official announcements, but it was presumed the purpose was to give Hitler's people no rest from the screaming sirens.

Canadian-manned Mosquitoes on offensive patrol over France today destroyed a Heinkel-111, which is a twin-engined bomber, and severely damaged another over the Bourges-Avord airfield, it was announced.

Beaufighters of the Coastal Command shot down three Nazi aircraft over the Bay of Biscay. Two of the Beaufighters failed to return.

The Vichy radio said Allied planes scattered leaflets over Paris urging workers to revolt.

The Emden battle was taken as striking proof that the Americans are forcing the Nazis to engage in aerial combat.

Although limited by poor weather to only three major operations in 11 days in December, the U. S. Eighth Air Force has downed 172 Nazi planes this month—almost 65 per cent of the total American bag of 266 in November.

The great score over Emden was apparently due to the fact that the Nazis rose to fight in considerable numbers for the first time in several weeks. The high number of German casualties appeared attributable also to the increased armament on Flying Fortresses—heavy bomber gunners alone ac-

Arnold Says Nazis Face Fearful Blows

War Sidelights

Nazi Flier's Sister Kills Self in N. Y.

New York, Dec. 12 (INS).—A former photographers' model and cigarette ad beauty committed suicide today, and indications were she killed herself because of worries over her brother, a Nazi air force lieutenant.

She was blonde Catherine Gunold, 39, who turned on four gas jets in her one-room apartment.

Neighbors informed police that the woman had been brooding over the fate of her brother, a Luftwaffe lieutenant, whose photograph was in the apartment. She was quoted as having told friends: "If America wins, I know my brother will die. I don't want him to die, but I want America to win."

Russians Visit U. S. Lines

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Dec. 8 (Delayed) (AP).—A Russian military mission has visited the Fifth and Eighth Army fronts on an inspection tour for the first time since the Italian campaign began.

Among the group who visited the forward units of the American Fifth Army was Maj. Gen. Nester Solodovnik, who was with the British Eight army last winter as war correspondent for Tass, the Russian news agency.

Treasury to Redeem 3¼ Per Cent Bonds

The Treasury yesterday called for redemption on April 15 of all outstanding 3¼ per cent Treasury bonds of 1944-46. About $1,519,000,000 of these bonds now are outstanding, Secretary Morgenthau said.

In advance of the redemption date, bond holders may be offered the privilege of exchanging all or part of their holdings for other interest-bearing obligations, the Treasury said.

Great Numbers Of Bombers Ready, Air Chief States

By Wes Gallagher

Aboard an Army Transport Over the Mediterranean, Dec. 12 (AP).—"Fearful and terrible air attacks are in prospect for Hiler-dominated Germany this winter and spring," Gen. Henry H. (Hap) Arnold predicted today after a tour of the Mediterranean war front.

"We are bringing over to this theater and England great numbers of bombers undreamed of a year ago," the commander of the U. S. Army Air Forces told correspondents at a final press conference before leaving this theater.

Flanked by Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, northwest African Air Force commander, Arnold held the conference in a bombed airport building just before taking off in a pouring rain.

"The RAF will bomb every city in Germany by night, and we will by day," Arnold declared, saying the Americans were about ready to strike by day at every point in Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania.

"Twenty-four-hour 360-degree bombing of Germany is about ready to start," the general asserted, adding punch to his statement yesterday that Germany soon would be hit from all sides.

He said American bombers could strike every place they wanted to from their present bases, and that "of course the closer we get, the bigger loads we can carry."

The strategic air force of heavy bombers does not need airfields at Rome or to the north to hit at every point in Germany, Arnold declared.

Accompanied by Spaatz, Arnold toured both the air and battle front in Italy. He was conducted personally yesterday by Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army commander.

Arnold said he had been most impressed by the work of American Army engineers.

"The Germans are masters of destruction, but somehow American engineers repair bridges, roads, railroads, and build airfields out of wilderness all in an amazingly short time," he said, comparing the situation to World War I when advances were held up for days by demolitions.

Arnold also praised hospital staffs for splendid work under difficult conditions, and said he felt humble in the presence of young American wounded "who smile and say they are all right although many know they will never leave hospitals."

tion of the Dnieper bend will have been freed of Germans.

German broadcasts said concentrations of Soviet landing boats at the mouth of the Dnieper were attacked by German planes and that at least six craft were destroyed and several others damaged. This indicated that the Russians, installed on the Dnieper estuary within striking distance of Odessa, Nikolaev or Kherson—all keypoints in German defenses—were preparing an attack in one or more of the three directions.

Freighter Wrecked

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 12 (AP).—The Canadian freighter "Sarnian," which went aground in a gale Friday off the east coast of the upper Michigan Peninsula, cracked amidship last night and the crew had to abandon the vessel. The crew was taken aboard the Coast Guard cutter "Plaintree," which with the Eagle Harbor Coast Guard had been standing by.

broadcaster said 10 United States planes had raided Hankow shortly after midnight, and that 8 Liberators and 4 Warhawks struck Hanoi.)

The Fourteenth Air Force communique said many fires had been started in Hankow in the Thursday night raid.

The thought here was that Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's rapidly expanding American air force might be able to support Chinese ground forces sufficiently to enable them to launch important drives in conjunction with a general Allied counteroffensive, despite the lack of equipment for Chinese troops.

China's desire to contribute her full share to Japan's defeat was considerably stimulated by the Cairo decision to restore all territory China has lost to Japan since 1894.

counted for 117 of the enemy—and to a noticeable lack of experience of some German pilots.

Not since the smashing raid of October 14 on the Schweinfurt ball bearing works, when 104 enemy fighters were knocked from the sky, had the American heavy bombers exceeded the 100 mark in kills on one operation. The greatest chunk ever taken from the Luftwaffe's fighter ranks occurred August 17, when 307 fighters were destroyed on the twin Regensburg-Schweinfurt attacks.

Archduke Otto Sees Hitler's Illusions Spiked

Archduke Otto, of Austria, yesterday described the declarations of Moscow, Teheran and Cairo as "political blockbusters" in an address at the Charles Carroll Forum in the Willard Hotel.

Expressing the opinion that "the enemy has now no more illusions," he said Hitler must now be convinced that Germany will be definitely crushed by America, Great Britain and Russia.

Archduke Otto reminded that the United States should not overlook the fact that a very strong "patriotic and nationalistic feeling is sweeping the occupied countries." He added that the peoples in these countries feel very strongly that their future politics belong to them and them alone and they do not want foreigners to interfere with their rights.

Henry, Convicted Slayer, Begins 2d Hunger Strike

Jeff Henry, 36, a former District policeman awaiting sentence for the murder of his wife, was reported on another hunger strike last night.

After refusing food for three days in the District Jail infirmary, Henry broke his fast Saturday. When he was brought up for sentence Friday in Justice Matthew McGuire's Court, the prisoner broke away from his guards and screamed at the judge's bench. Sentence was postponed until Henry is able to appear in court.

3-Way Assault on Germany In Making Now, De Gaulle Says

Algiers, Dec. 12 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, president of the French National Committee, told a mass meeting at Constantine in eastern Algiers today that "a concentrated assault" on Germany was being prepared "at this very moment from the east, west and south."

"We shall not rest," he continued, "until the moment when free nations meet on the soil of defeated Germany.

"Nevertheless, Germany is still opposing us with stubborn resistance which means that the camp of freedom has not yet reached the end of its efforts."

Voice for Algerians

To play her part in the victory and to "regain her power," the French leader added, "France knows how long and hard she will still have to fight, suffer and work."

De Gaulle said the National Committee had decided to give the native population a greater voice in the government of Algeria and to take steps to improve the living conditions of the masses.

The general's supporters clarified his remarks by saying that it was the purpose not only to place French North Africa on a sounder basis, but also to reply to British criticism of France's handling of native problems.

"The Committee of Liberation has decided to grant full rights and citizenship immediately to several tens of thousands of French Moslems," De Gaulle said.

"The personal statute," which up to now has barred such natives from full citizenship except on a voluntary surrender of certain Moslem rights, such as polygamy, would no longer apply under the new measures.

Local Representation

"At the same time, the proportion of French Moslems will be increased in the various local assemblies," De Gaulle said. "Concurrently, a great number of administrative posts will be opened to those having the qualifications."

De Gaulle took an indirect slap at America and Britain for their policies of restricted recognition of the National Committee:

"Here (in Algiers) are found the representatives that numerous foreign powers have sent to the committee, thus showing that they well know, despite certain formulas of expediency, with whom lies the heart of France."

The crowd broke into the general's speech at several points with the chant, "Vive de Gaulle!"

The speech was followed by a parade of American, British and French troops.

ferring to the French mission that helped train Brazilian officers 20 years before the war.

Ord explained that the Brazilian staff setup was based on the French system, which is akin to that of the United States, and that integration with other Allied forces would be simple.

Ord said Brazil had a good-sized professional army. Previously equipped and trained with European artillery, its equipment will be "standardized" according to whatever theater the Brazilian forces serve in, he added.

Most of Brazil's latest equipment came from United States Lend-Lease, including artillery, medium and heavy tanks, pursuit, patrol and bombing planes.

A group of ground force and air force officers will remain at Allied headquarters to continue preparations for Brazil's entry. The remainder will continue to tour this theater, then return to Brazil.

Announcement of their presence in Algiers referred to the recent statement of Brazilian minister of war Gen. Eurico Dutra, that Brazil was "not interested in sending a symbolic force abroad. We are going to send a strong air and ground force overseas to fight against our enemy, Germany."

Expert Opinion

An Advanced Air Base Somewhere in Italy, Dec. 12 (AP).—President Roosevelt almost lost his crown as the world's most photogenic leader, in the opinion of a crack United States Air Forces combat camera crew who were the only photographers accompanying the President on his tour of North Africa, Cairo, Teheran and Malta.

And Premier Stalin was the man who almost took the title away, they said today.

"Stalin has a perfect camera face," said Maj. George W. Reineking, 5400 Chesley st., Los Angeles, Calif., chief of the crew. "You can shoot him from any angle."

"He is almost better for a cameraman than the President," Lieut. Frank Burgess of Hollywood added.

The camera crew was ordered out on assignment overnight, picking up the President's party en route to Cairo, and to a man they said "it was the biggest thrill of our lives." The assignment came as a complete surprise.

Prime Minister Churchill was rated a poor photographic third to Roosevelt and Stalin.

Sergt. Ray Van Dan, Rochester, N. Y., explained that Churchill "always sits cockeyed in a chair at some odd angle, and he is hard to photograph well."

Hungary Flooded With Pamphlets Calling for Peace

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—Germany was reported to be pouring reinforcements into Bulgaria today, seeking with bayonet and propaganda to prop the wobbling pro-Nazi government of that Balkan satellite.

As continental reports to Stockholm told of the hasty dispatch of more troops to prevent a repetition of World War I—when Bulgaria was the first of the Kaiser's allies to desert the doomed Second Reich—unmistakable signs seeped through the tight censorship that Allied bombings and counterpropaganda were bearing fruit.

The Cairo radio said the tension was spreading to Hungary, where the country was said to be flooded by pamphlets of the Hungarian Peace Party urging resistance to the war effort.

Sofia Reported Bombed Again

Unconfirmed reports from the Paris radio that Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, had been bombed again last night punctuated the statement in Italy of Gen. Henry H. Arnold, U. S. Army Air Forces commander, that the Americans were about ready to strike at every point in Germany, Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania.

Another solemn warning was made at Washington last night by Secretary of State Hull that the governments of Bulgaria and Hungary must share the "consequences" of the terrible defeat that United Nations arms are so surely bringing to all Nazi Germany.

A renewal of reports that the Bulgarian foreign minister had resigned came from Ankara. His action was prompted, these reports said, by the American Liberator assault Friday which sent bomb-frightened Bulgars flocking from Sofia to the countryside; by the Cairo and Teheran conferences and by the reported Russian decision to recognize the regime of Marshal Josip Broz (Drug Tito), the Partisan guerilla leader, as the legal government of neighboring Yugoslavia.

The Paris broadcast that Sofia had been bombed again last night, plus the Cairo report that the city had been bombed yesterday, may have been erroneous references to the Friday attack on the Bulgarian capital by Mediterranean-based American Liberators.

Greatest Blow Yet to Morale

(One possible source of the Cairo and Paris reports was a Hungarian agency broadcast that delayed-action bombs dropped Friday still were exploding in Sofia.)

One dispatch to Stockholm said the Friday raid not only had caused terrific destruction in Sofia, but also had demoralized the populace to a greater extent than any other thing thus far in the war.

This report said residents of Budapest and Bucharest were leaving the two cities by the thousands, in the fear that other Balkan capitals would share Sofia's fate.

Russian recognition of Tito's newly-proclaimed government—reported by the Turkish radio but not yet confirmed by Moscow—would have a powerful influence on the puppet Bulgarian government, now in the hands of a regency since the death of King Boris.

It would serve notice on Sofia that the Kremlin, having bypassed King Peter's Yugoslav government, might accord the same treatment later on to the present Bulgarian regime which still maintains diplomatic relations with Moscow.

Rommel Reported Named To Gird Europe for Invasion

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—German reports reaching Stockholm today said that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, the "desert fox" of North Africa and one of Germany's outstanding defense strategists, had been named anti-invasion chief to prepare for the Allied attack on Western Europe.

Rommel, who has been directing the over-all command of German troops both in the Balkans and Italy, had been reported inspecting Denmark's coastal defenses all week.

Rommel now has gone to Norway after making his inspection in Denmark, the Danish press service reported.

Berlin dispatches said that although the tension was still great in the Balkans over a possible Allied land invasion, German military experts expected the biggest Allied attack in the west.

The Scandinavian telegraph bureau, reporting Rommel's appointment, said Nazi commanders viewed the defense of western France and northern Germany as more important than northern Italy.

Vichy reports, via Madrid, confirmed this report and said the Germans in France believed the Allies had withdrawn some of their best troops from the Italian Front for use on another front.

The Germans were said to believe a major Allied attack would some soon but apparently were unable to decide whether it would come only in the English Channel or simultaneously with a thrust in the Mediterranean.

Rommel was expected to visit other countries on the rim of German-dominated Europe beside Denmark.

Spanish correspondents in Vichy spoke of "redoubled vigilance in certain places and new and strict orders governing night driving. Preparations were made for evacuation of 9000 children from the Riviera and plans made for the partial evacuation of Paris."

However, the Germans apparently had no intention of declaring Paris an open city as the French did in 1940. Plans were made to lodge and supply millions of Parisians in provincial towns.

Iran Agreement In Preparation

Teheran, Dec. 10 (Delayed) (AP). Teheran, passing from the world spotlight, has returned to normal, but there is daily activity of American, British and Russian representatives preparing a treaty or agreement effectuating the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin Iran declaration of 10 days ago.

Among the Americans is Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley.

Tito Appeals to Guerilla Forces To Rise Against Big Nazi Drive

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—Marshal Josip Broz (Drug Tito) dramatically appealed to his scattered mountain fighters today to rise up everywhere and wage desperate battle against a mojor German drive to crush the Yugoslav guerillas.

"The moment has come when all our strength must be devoted to the battle," he commanded in a special order of the day broadcast from his army of liberation headquarters.

To his guerilla units scattered throughout the mountains and forests of the hinterland—as usually distinguished in Yugoslav communiques from the regular liberation army—he addressed a special section of the proclamation:

"I order all those units of our armies who are fighting on sectors where no enemy offensive is in progress to carry out at once offensive operations of their own against the enemy's most strategic positions.

"Partisan formations, destroy bridges, railway lines and factories working for the enemy. Cut the enemy's supply lines and make his troop movements impossible."

Tito's appeal came as his red-starred forces battled the sixth and strongest Nazi drive to wipe out embattled Yugoslav guerillas.

Cairo althorities have estimated that Tito now commands a loosely-organized army of 200,000 peasants who fight and live off the land, with supplies for the most part seized from the Germans and Italians.

The Turkish radio broadcast an unconfirmed report early today that the Soviet government had decided to recognize Tito's newly formed Yugoslav government as the legal representative of his country rather than King Peter's exiled regime in Cairo.

America and Britain also have shown recent signs of favoring Tito's efforts over those of his rival leader, Gen. Draja Mihailovic, King Peter's war minister, by shifting the bulk of Allied supplies going into that country to Tito's pro-Russian movement.

Fierce Battles Raging

On the fighting front, Tito announced in his daily communique that the fiercest battles are now raging in the mountainous regions of inner Bosnia.

"After bitter fighting lasting for a fortnight, formations of a German division strongly supported by tanks succeeded in penetrating the town of Prijepolje," the announcement said. "Fighting for the town is still going on. The enemy has suffered heavy losses."

He said a second German offensive was in progress in the Imotski Duvno sector, where other German tank units have succeeded in penetrating the outskirts of Duvno.

(A Berlin radio broadcast recorded by CBS said "No less than 3200 Partisans were hunted down and accounted for" in eastern Bosnia during the past 72 nours.)

Constitution Announced

In the political field, the Free Yugoslav radio announced the constitution on which the new rump government headed by Tito and Dr. Ivan Ribar in opposition to King Peter's government-in-exile will be based.

Adopted by the Anti-Fascist Council of the National Liberation Movement, which was declared set up for the war's duration, it pledges a new Yugoslavia based on equality of all her nationalities.

The Anti-Fascist Council will elect a presidium which in turn will elect a "national committee for the liberation of Yugoslavia," the radio said. This national committee will be the highest executive organ of the Tito-Ribar regime. It will be composed of a president, three vice presidents and a number of commissioners who will be responsible to the presidium and to the Anti-Fascist Council.

Still farther south, Fifth Army guns heavily shelled the area east of San Pietro, a village strongly fortified by the Germans with pillboxes and barbed wire to protect the approaches to Cassino.

The German command threw in its heaviest fighter support in weeks in efforts to stem the Allied advance, sending out about 130 sorties during the day. But the Nazi pilots generally avoided combat, hiding in the clouds for opportunities for strafing attacks, and only one enemy plane was downed. One Allied pilot was missing.

Allied fighters and fighter-bombers were active despite bad weather. United States Warhawks attacked targets at San Vittore, Cassino and Cervaro, on the Via Casilina to Rome, and the seaports of Anzio and Nettuno, southwest of Rome. RAF Spitfires hopped on transports in the Chieti area, destroying nine vehicles and damaging 20.

American invaders hammered rail targets at Arce, on the road to Rome, and Acquafondala and Vitticuso, just behind the German lines.

Atlantic Sinkings Drop 80% In 2d Year of War for U. S.

By the Associated Press

An 80 per cent decline in U-boat losses inflicted on Western Atlantic shipping in the second year of American participation in the war has pointed up the Teheran pledge that "no power on earth can prevent our destroying the German U-boats by sea."

From December 7, 1941, until the end of the following November, Axis submarines took a toll of 585 Allied and neutral ships in the Western Atlantic, a weekly average of more than ten ships.

In the next twelve months the losses dropped to two ships a week.

An Associated Press tabulation of Western Atlantic ship losses (announced dates of sinkings used where possible) follows:

Month	2nd year	1st year
December ..	20 (1942)	23 (1941)
January ...	12 (1943)	21 (1942)
February ..	18	28
March	17	51
April	9	49
May	10	102
June	3	111
July	13	51
August	1	53
September .	1	34
October	2	28
November ..	4	34
Total	110	585

The trend was reflected in the statement by Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, USN, retired, who said in October that on the eastern sea frontier, where more than half of the world's sinkings occurred in the early part of 1942, only three vessels were sunk in the 15-month period through September, 1943.

Other indications of Allied success in the Battle of the Atlantic were claims to the destruction of more than 150 U-boats in the six-month period through last October and the joint Anglo-American declarations that in the past four months the number of Axis undersea craft sunk exceeded the total of their victims.

Navy Secretary Knox said recently that the U. S. fleet, primarily responsible for guarding Western Atlantic shipping lanes, has been increased from a Pearl Harbor strength of 344 fighting ships to 817 combatant vessels, including at least 40 aircraft carriers and 269 destroyer escorts.

In the meantime American shipyards had delivered, by the end of November, 25,284,387 deadweight tons of new merchant shipping under a two-year building program.

Secretary Knox pointed out recently that by Thanksgiving Day the United Nations had made good all their merchant ship tonnage losses, from all causes, since the start of the European war.

5 Ships Sunk in Caribbean

A Caribbean Port, Dec. 12 (AP).—German submarines operating in Caribbean waters have sunk five ships within a month, it was disclosed today, with announcement that a small Panamanian freighter had been torpedoed a few days ago.

Submarine attacks in this area, which had been comparatively free from the U-boat menace for nearly a year, were resumed early in November. Four men were lost in the latest sinking, raising the toll of missing to 58.

Pastor Deplores 'Pagan Carnival' Air of Christmas

The Rev. C. Stewart McKenzie, pastor of Western Presbyterian Church, yesterday deplored the fact that "the chief Christmas festival has degenerated into a pagan carnival."

"It is due in part to the utterly Godless pressure of business," he stated, "the spirit of which has always been antagonistic to Jesus Christ. When His spirit challenges the low moral practices of much of the business world, business has responded by attempting to destroy Christianity. Failing in that, it has tried to neutralize it by paganizing it.

"The vast Christmas business brings enormous profit to non-Christians, whose chief concern is to get as much money out of the 'season' as possible. The rush of business drives out the spirit of Christ. The holy season has become a pagan holiday."

PAW Sees Same Gas Quotas in 1944

By the Associated Press

Prospects of increased gasoline quotas for civilian use early in 1944 are extremely thin, the Petroleum Administration for War said yesterday.

In fact, PAW added, military requirements might necessitate regional reductions in present motor fuel allotments.

Harold L. Ickes, PAW administrator, has said military use of gasoline, particularly high-octane airplane fuel, will increase in both war theaters in 1944.

Quotas are "entirely dependent on war needs," PAW declared, and a sudden acceleration of activity in any fighting zone might require quota reductions in the supply areas back of shipping points on either coast.

Shift of considerable numbers of railway tankcars from East Coast service to the West Coast, announced by the Office of Defense Transportation, was not expected to affect East Coast stocks. The oil transportation problem "has been licked," the petroleum agency said, by completion of pipelines, and the problem is now one of supply.

Agencies concerned with oil distribution said local shortages probably will be eased as a result of OPA ordering T coupons for commercial gasoline to be numbered like theater tickets.

Loose administration of T coupon issuance has been blamed officially for major leaks of gasoline into illegal channels. "Spot" shortages, usually short-lived, have resulted from use in excess of regional quota allotments.

Dangerous Home-Front Trends and the urgent need for unity

SPEECH

of December 9, 1943

by SAM RAYBURN

Speaker of the House of Representatives

Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether it is possible for me by saying what I have in my heart today to say to be helpful to all of us or not. I read a great deal, I hear a lot of conversation, I hear things and I see things on the printed page that I feel are very hurtful to the unity of your country and mine and if I were going to say what would be the subject of my remarks today I would say that I desire to speak on some dangerous trends.

I know that every man and woman in this House loves this country. I do not doubt the patriotism of a single one of you, I do not doubt the patriotism of those numberless millions of men and women out there. I do know that there are complaints about supposed sacrifices. I think I know, however, that the people in this country who are making the greatest sacrifices are complaining the least. I think of the mother of six sons, a widow, in the district I represent. Every one of her sons is in the Army or in the Navy. She is not complaining, but is meeting her sacrifice as a great American and has gone out to get herself a war job.

Constant Questions on England

Every day or every week somebody, somewhere asks: "What are we going to do with England after the war is over?" "Is England in diplomacy going to outdo us after the war is over?" "What is going to be done with this little island or that little island or the other little island in some sea after this war is over?" "Is England going to stride the world like a colossus?"

That is dangerous talk. Anything calculated to bring about disunity and wrong thinking in our own country or disunity among us and those allied with us is dangerous talk, it is dangerous propaganda; it is a reflection upon the intelligence of American manhood and womanhood that we do not have patriotism enough and brains enough to sit around a peace table with anybody upon the face of the earth.

I brand expressions like that as canards, not only upon the patriotism, but the intelligence of those who will represent us when this terrible war is over.

Then somebody says to me: "What are we going to do with Russia after the war is over?" "What is Russia going to do after the war is over?" What I am interested in in 1943 and 1944 is what Russia is doing now. We will settle those things after this war is over.

They ask, is Russia going to communize the world? Will that strange doctrine find root in American soil? It will only when the people of the United States are willing to accept communism, and not until then.

Is somebody trying to change our form of government, they ask; an insidious group somewhere? Now, listen: Under our form of government and the way we have of doing, the election of Members of the House of Representatives each 2 years, the election of a President every 4 years, and the election of all the Senate each 6 years; this form of government of yours and mine is not going to be changed until the people, exercising their intelligence and an unpurchasable ballot, vote to change this form of government.

Quick Army, Navy Decisions Vital

Another thing, especially since the Patton affair, which was tragically unfortunate, the Army has not escaped whisperings. Of course, everybody knows that mistakes have been made, that judgments have gone wrong. If in the Army they had had months to consider whether or not they would do a certain thing, some of the seeming mistakes might not have been made. We were attacked and we were unprepared to defend ourselves. Things had to be done in a hurry. Decisions had to be made, when you could not even wait overnight. I do fear that these men in the Army and in the Navy, if criticism goes on, and if they are called into the open to answer questions that many times should be asked in executive session, may themselves come to fear to make decisions upon which the fate of the Nation or a hemisphere may depend.

I call your attention to that because I know that these earnest men are using all of their training, all of their brains, and all of their patriotism to do this job well, and to do it as quickly as it is possible. If the Army and the Navy cannot run this war better than any civilian, then we should have done away with West Point and Annapolis a long time ago.

So when these strange things are talked and printed and blared over the radio, I hope that we, if we are fortunate enough to have a few days among our own people during the Christmas season, which at its best cannot be a very happy Christmas, will go back and try to stamp out some of these things among our own people.

Another thing, ceilings for the other fellow but not for me; price fixation for the other fellow but not for me; uncontrolled inflation on what I have to sell but controlled prices on what I am called upon to buy—that just will not work.

Production Story Is Unequaled

We can tell the people of America a story of production unequaled by anything in the annals of time. Two things stand out in 1942, and will for half a century, in my opinion. One was the swift conversion of American industry from what it was doing to the manufacture of the instruments of war, and the mass production that they brought about. The other was the unexpected and successful resistance of Russia.

Some people say, "Why send so many things across the ocean to other people?" I would rather send bullets and bread to the armies of the Allies to fight on their front than to have to send more of our boys to fight on all fronts.

Let me repeat that the people, in my opinion, who are complaining the most are the ones least justified in complaining. I am an average American citizen, no better, I know, no worse, I hope, than the average. I have no son to give to this war or to the reconstruction of a sad and stricken world after it is over, and I am in the same position as at least 50 per cent of the men and women. I am wondering what sacrifice I have made, and I cannot think of a single one. Maybe I have been slightly inconvenienced. Like the average American, I have had all the coffee I needed to drink and plenty of sugar to go into it. I have had enough gasoline to transact my essential business. I have eaten well and plenty, as has every other American citizen, and many of them are eating better today than they have even eaten before. Of course, I have bought some bonds, all I can afford to buy. That is no sacrifice. I will get my money back with interest, if these boys who are fighting and dying over there win this war for you and for me.

We in this country would not know that a war was on if we did not read the newspapers, hear the radio, and see the vacant chairs in the homes of the country. In all probability, a hostile gun will never be heard fired inside of this hemisphere, a bomb in all probability will never fall. But when I think of this widow that is giving six sons, she is making a sacrifice. When I think of her son who has been in command of a submarine in the Pacific Ocean ever since Pearl Harbor; when I think of millions of other mothers' sons who are in the Southwest Pacific, wading in the mud and murk of vermin-infested islands, where if disease does not attack them the murderous Jap is behind every stone, every stump, and every tree; when I think of the sacrifice of these people, I would despise myself if I complained about my little inconveniences, and that is the best or the worst or the greatest sacrifice I have made.

"Sad Commentary" on Some Humans

Some people are complaining who have improved their position during this war. I hate to think it, but as I do think it, I must say it, I think some groups in this country, at the expense of our unity in the war effort, are thinking more of their position after the war than they are of winning the war now. It is a sad commentary upon some human beings.

Some people just love to be unhappy. They just love to be scared, "What is Russia going to do to us?" "What is England going to do to us?" "What are they going to take from us?" "What have they got to give us after this thing is over?" "Are we going to be able to feed the world after this thing is over?" "Are they going to demand the bread and the meat that should go into the mouths of our people and the milk that should go into the stomachs of our children, to the deprivation of our people here?" Of course, that is not going to happen. Ah, my friends, this war is not over by a great deal. The people of the United States are so geared that if we win a little island somewhere they think the war is almost over. I think anyone who predicts the length of a war is dealing in superhazards. And I do not predict the length of the war in Europe or in Asia. But I cannot see anything in this situation, either in Europe or in Asia, that would cause me to believe it is going to be a short war. It is going to take the might and brain of every patriot under the flag to do this job. Our hands are to the plow. We cannot look back. The very fate of civilization depends not only on how our Army and our Navy act, but how you and I act and how you and I respond to the necessity of this hour.

Unity in this war effort we must have. And I trust the brains and the patriotism of Americans after it is all over to look after our interests. It is going to take the work, the loyalty, and the love of every citizen throughout the length and breadth of the earth who loves liberty and who is willing to sacrifice to preserve liberty in this world and make it again a decent place in which to live. I am saying this not for you so much as hoping that it might get out somewhere and might help somebody and might stop some complaints which are wholly unjustified. When I think of the millions of men and women who are making the supreme sacrifice in sons in this war, when I think of the bravery of the best equipped soldiers that ever went to battle in the history of mankind, how our production has put into their hands the greatest instruments of defense and for attack of any soldiers ever called to battle in all the history of mankind, if we do our job on this front in unity, not only here but with those who fight with us, God knows, and you know, that the boys who wear the uniform will do their part.

Armenian Prelate Says Last D. C. Mass

Archbishop Karekin Hovsepian, of New York City, recently elevated to the Chair of Catholicos of the Great House of Cecilia, in the Armenian Apostolic Church, yesterday said his farewell mass to Washingtonian Armenians. He succeeds Papkes Catholicos, who died a year ago.

The position of Catholicos in the Armenian Apostolic Church is comparable to the Papacy in the Roman Catholic Church.

In America 5 Years

The 76-year-old archbishop came to America five years ago from a Russian monastery to become head of the Aremanian Apostolic Church in North and South America. He will leave shortly for the Antilas monastery in Beirut, Syria, where he will administer the duties of his church throughout the world.

The service yesterday was held at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, 18th and Church sts. nw., where the Armenians have been meeting on Sunday afternoons once monthly.

The trustees and the Ladies' Aid Society of the Armenian Apostolic Church will stage a banquet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel, honoring the fiftieth anniversary of Archbishop Hovsepian's ordination to the priesthood and his elevation to the new position. Dr. M. M. Dolmage, local dentist, is president of the local Armenian congregation.

The Archbishop is now working on a monograph of ancient manuscripts that will be published by the Smithsonian Institution. He is an authority on the subject.

Prohibitionists' Candidate Denied Air Priorities

Los Angeles, Dec. 12 (AP).—Claude A. Watson, the Prohibition Party's 1944 presidential nominee, said today he has been denied air travel priorities for campaign purposes.

Watson, attorney and Free Methodist minister, said he had been advised by Col. R. W. Ireland, assistant chief of staff for priorities and traffic in Washington, that air travel is reserved for missions directly associated with the war effort.

"I am wondering if this is to be a general policy for all presidential candidates when they are nominated," Watson said.

Landon Predicts GOP Victory in 1944

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 12 (AP).—Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican presidential candidate, reviewing last month's GOP election victories, asserted tonight "the Nation is headed for a decisive Republican victory in 1944."

Roosevelt to Run, O'Daniel Says

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—United States Senator W. Lee O'Daniel (Democrat) of Texas believes that President Roosevelt, with the support of what he termed a New Deal "dynasty" or "clique" and a controlled Democratic national convention, will run for a fourth term in an election during which "anything can happen"—including a Republican victory.

O'Daniel said today at a press conference:

"Assuming that President Roosevelt's health is good and he continues to be surrounded by the people who want his reelection, I think he'll run.

"I think he will control the convention—with all the force he has and all the build-up he has—I think he'll surely control the convention."

O'Daniel, former Texas Governor, pictured the New Deal political machine as certain to control delegations from many States—including Texas—at the Democratic national convention.

Questions intended to draw him out on the possibility of a third party composed of Southern Democrats elicited from O'Daniel the cautious comment that he had noted with interest suggestions for such a party, as well as the suggestion of a third party headed by Wendell Willkie.

Soviet, Czechs Sign Treaty Of Assistance

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Russians and the Czechoslovak government in extile took the first great stride today toward erecting a solid barrier against future German aggression in eastern Europe by binding themselves together in a treaty of mutual assistance and postwar collaboration.

The far-reaching agreement, which opened the way for Poland also to join in wiping out once and for all any German dream of a drive to the east, was signed at the Kremlin in a ceremony attended by Premier Marshal Stalin and Czech President Eduard Benes, the Moscow radio announced. The way may have been paved by the conference of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshall Stalin at Teheran.

To Be Published Tomorrow

The brief announcement said the details of the agreement would not be published until Tuesday, but the protocol, the contents of which were learned in London before Benes left for the Moscow signing, provided that any neighbors of Russia and Crechoslovakia which are not aligned with the Germans, could come in later.

This was considered here as a flat invitation to Poland to join for she is the only country definitely coming within this category and some Poles here are understood to be favorably inclined.

For 20 Years' Duration

The new agreement, which is for 20 years' duration and is patterned after the British-Russian pact of May 26, 1942, includes a Soviet disclaimer of any intention of Bolshevizing the smaller European countries, it is understood.

Besides Stalin and Benes, the Kremlin signing ceremony was attended by Soviet President Michael Kalinin and Marshal Klementi E. Voroshilov.

The broadcast said that Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov signed the document for the Soviet Union and Col. Zdenek Fierlinger, Czechoslovak Ambassador to Moscow, for his Government.

Play by Sorority Raises Money To Aid Servicemen

"The Drunkard Was a Lady," a seven-act Gay Nineties melodrama, was presented to an audience of 400 by the members of Iota Gamma Phi sorority last night at the Wardman Park Hotel to raise funds to furnish day rooms for wounded servicemen. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Col. Martin DuFrenne, commanding officer, Station Hospital, Fort Myer, Va., were the sponsors.

A special section of the theater was reserved for soldiers from Walter Reed Hospital, who were guests of the sorority.

Gerrie Gossin directed and produced the play. Leading parts were played by Barbara Sauber, Rita Atlas, Elaine Keroes, Marilyn Rosenthal and Beverly Bildman.

Medical Board to Scrutinize 4-F Draft Standards

By the Associated Press

Whether the father draft slows up appreciably, as Congress wants apparently hinged last night on prospective moves to lower physical standards and tap the 4-F pool, plus a tentative plan to release some of the younger men now deferred for occupational reasons.

These two devices emerged from a conference of the House Military Committee with Selective Service officials Saturday which brought from Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky the assertion that "there is going to be a big improvement."

Knows What Is Wanted

May said Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey indicated he "knows what Congress wants . . . what he is going to do, and how to do it."

A new law places Hershey in full charge of Selective Service removing the agency from Paul V. McNutt Manpower Commission.

Hershey and Lieut.-Col. Francis V. Keesling, disclosed that:

Draft boards are under new orders to delay calling of prewar fathers as long as possible.

To Check Standards

A commission of five doctors is to examine standards to see if they can be lowered enough to make some men previously rejected for physical defects eligible for duty.

There are about 3,400,000 now in class 4-F, rejected for physical handicaps. Chairman May said Hershey felt that in some respects the standards had been rigorous too. He quoted the director as saying that if these were relaxed, it would provide "a fertile field for manpower."

A plan is under discussion under which no draft registrant under 22 years of age will be granted occupational deferment except in the mandatory categories such as clergymen, irreplaceable farmers, elected officials and medical students.

If this turns out to be practical, Keesling said, it might be applied to all men under 25. The War Department already has decided it would make no more requests for deferment of its employes under 22, Keesling added.

World Food Group Plans Constitution

By the Associated Press

A proposed constitution for a permanent world food organization probably will be ready for submission to the 44 participating nations in January, L. B. Pearson, chairman of an interim commission, said last night.

The interim group was set up by the Hot Springs Food Conference last June to develop a detailed plan for the permanent organization to carry out the conference's recommendations for international collaboration in imprving nutrition, stimulating world agriculture and generally improving the well-being of the populations.

End Steel Curbs, Murray Asks

Removal of all restrictions upon use of steel for civilian purposes was asked of the War Production Board yesterday by Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In a letter to WPB Chairman Donald Nelson, the CIO chief declared that such action is necessary to "take up the lag caused by the falling off in orders from war procurement agencies.

Washington Man Wins Air Medal For Achievement

Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commander of the Allied Air Forces in the Southwest Pacific, has awarded the Air Medal to S/Sergt. William J. Trollinger, jr., of 1235 W st. se., "for meritorious achievement" while participating in 100 hours of operational flight missions in the Southwest Pacific area during which hostile contact was probable and expected.

Throughout the operations, the citation stated, he demonstrated outstanding ability, courage and devotion to duty.

He is on active duty with a bombardment squadron of the Fifth Air Force which is playing a major role in General MacArthur's offensive against the Japanese in the South and Southwest Pacific.

If you need a good
IRON TONIC

Do you tire easily? Are your nerves on edge—your appetite poor? Have you lost your old pep and endurance? . . . Then be on your guard, because such signs often point to a shortage of iron in the blood which, in turn, may lead to more serious troubles.

In cases of iron deficiency, Gude's Pepto-Mangan can be very beneficial. Pepto-Mangan helps make the blood redder and richer in iron. Many doctors prescribe Pepto-Mangan for pale, weak, rundown men, women and children who need more iron to build them up and to help them get back their strength, appetite and pep.

Has proved its benefits for more than 50 years. Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists with a money-back guarantee of satisfaction. Ask for the original and only Gude's Pepto-Mangan!

That's why we cannot anticipate if and when the crowded conditions of our passenger trains will be relieved . . . why we request that you travel sparingly.

We are grateful for the loyalty and cooperative spirit of our patrons. But we cannot fairly encourage pleasure travel until after the war is won and the imperative need for passenger equipment has passed.

Then, we expect to supply finer service than ever between the East and Florida. But this is wartime. And wartime is the time to travel sparingly!

TRAVEL SPARINGLY*

If you MUST travel you can help solve the wartime transportation problem if you will:

- Plan every trip and buy round-trip tickets well in advance.
- Cancel your reservations promptly, if you change your plans.
- Accept available accommodations cheerfully.
- Travel in mid-week.
- Travel light, taking only one piece of baggage.
- Wait your turn in the dining car patiently.

FREE RED POINTS for Used Cooking Fats

"Behind this plan, effective December 13, 1943, is one of our country's most urgent wartime needs," says Mr. Bowles. "Every patriotic American wife and mother is asked to read this statement."

"WARS are fought with gunpowder. Gunpowder is made from glycerine. Glycerine can only be made from fats.

"Behind those few words lies one of your country's most serious needs. Fats used to be imported in huge quantities from the islands of the Far East. Those islands are now in enemy hands. And, to make the mountains of ammunition we must have, the government wants the used fats you can save in your kitchen. It wants them also for medicines, synthetic rubber and other battlefield needs.

"Not a Premium on Patriotism"

"These are the facts as they have been pointed out to OPA by the War Food Administration, the agency that is charged with building up our national fat supply. And the facts have led to this new plan: 'Two red ration points free when you turn in a pound of used fat to your butcher.'

"This is not a premium on patriotism—or merely a spur to your conscience. It is a way of bringing home to all women the urgent need of that gunpowder—and of the kitchen fats to make it.

"Moreover, it seems only just to return points to the housewife for this service, because fats are scarce and cost ration stamps to obtain.

"Your butcher has been informed of this ruling which went into effect on December 13, 1943."

Chester Bowles

How the Plan Will Work

It's as simple as it sounds. All you have to do is fill up a tin can with used cooking fat and take it to your butcher. You don't need to use a special kind of can — any kind will do. And you don't need to have any specified amount of fat; take it to your butcher whenever the can is full. He will estimate the weight of the tin and give you, cash in hand, 4¢ and two red points for every pound of used fat you deliver.

The government does not ask for these fats—even to make gunpowder — until you've got the cooking good out of them. But when that is done, every spoonful, every single drop is wanted.

Would it surprise you to learn that just one single tablespoon of fat—just the little bit that is usually washed out of your broilers and roasting pans and skillets — will make five machine gun bullets for some American boy in a foxhole? Or enough smallpox vaccines for seventy-three men?

Answers to Housewives' Questions

It doesn't matter in the least whether the fat is burned or blackened. The blackest kind of used kitchen grease still makes crystal-clear glycerine.

It doesn't matter whether the fat comes from pan drippings, used shortening, cooking oils, melted pieces of solid fat or any other source.

And, finally, it doesn't matter how long it takes to fill your can. A tablespoon a day from every home will see us through. But guard every drop of it as though you held a soldier's life.

Saving used cooking fats and taking them to your butcher is not an easy job. But it's a lot easier than the things your boy and your neighbor's boy are called on to do on the battle fronts.

Is it too much for them to expect that the wives and mothers of America will perform this task for them—to help put into their hands the ammunition without which they can never hope to win?

They know it is not. And they know that all their country has to do is ask—once our women really understand.

Excise Boosts Not to Be Felt Before Feb. 1

By Felix Cotten
International News Service Staff Writer

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, declared last night that the new tax bill could not be passed in time to permit increases in excise taxes to be put into effect January 1.

This will mean, he explained, that increases in liquor, beer, and a long list of other excise tax rates will not go into effect until February 1 or later.

It is generally assumed, however, that the tax bill will become law well before February 1, and that the higher excise levies will become operative at that time.

Delay Will Be Costly

A delay of a month in putting excise tax increases in effect will means a loss to the Government of nearly 90 million dollars, if the rates passed by the House and approved by the Senate Finance Committee become law.

As passed by the House, the tax bill contains increases in excise taxes estimated by congressional tax experts to yield $1,201,700,000 of additional revenue a year. This would amount to 100 million dollars a month.

But the Senate Finance Committee has whittled 217 million dollars of revenue from the bill, and of this total 143 millions would be lost by reduction in House-approved excise tax rates.

The house bill was estimated to yield two billion, 139 million dollars of additional revenue a year, but Finance Committee pruning has reduced the total to one billion, 922 million dollars.

Far Below Request

This is a far cry from the 10½ billions a year which Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson have said is necessary to buttress Government efforts to hold down inflation.

Finance Committee members are in doubt as to whether they will go out in search of more revenue than is contained in the House bill. Thus far they have only whittled down the total, and have not taken up the question of finding revenue.

New Zealand Editors Arrive in D. C. Today

Five editors of leading New Zealand newspapers en route to England will arrive in Washington today as guests of British Information. After a week consulting with members of Congress and the Army staff they will continue their journey.

They are E. V. Dumbleton, Auckland Star; P. H. N. Freeth, Christchurch Press; W. J. Green, Wellington Standard; A. A. Hardcastle, Wellington Evening Post, and W. A. Whitlock, Hawke's Bay Herald Tribune.

Victory Sidelights

Housewives Get Ration Stamps From Butchers for Grease

Beginning today, Washington butchers and those of the Nation will present cash and ration stamps to housewives.

The turn about was decreed by the OPA, which requested that all fats delivered to butchers for the war effort should be paid for at the rate of 2 cents per half-pound plus 1 brown stamp.

The retailer's part in the exchange is voluntary, but OPA suggested housewives will not experience difficulty in making the exchange if they melt kitchen fats, strain them and place in a clean container. Glass and paper containers are not acceptable. Retailers cannot be expected to "buy" fats in less than half-pound lots.

The program is designed to last indefinitely, OPA ruled.

Johnny Get Your VITAMINS!

Born with a silver spoon in his mouth? Not this baby! He's more concerned with the vital things of life—like his health. That's why he's Johnny-on-the-spot when it comes to getting his vitamins. Of course, at 14 months, baby's vitamins are dissolved in his orange juice and milk. Grown-ups swallow theirs in capsule form . . . But with Johnnies of all ages—14, 40 or 4-score—vitamins are modern health-essentials, supplementing today's war-time rationed diets. That's why The Hecht Co. features a complete department devoted exclusively to vitamins of many types. Ask your physician to prescribe the vitamin which best suits your needs. Then come to The Hecht Co. where our varied vitamin assortment includes:

Young Republicans Urge Soldier-Vote Legislation

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP).—The executive committee of the Young Republican National Federation called upon Congress today to "enact legislation permitting members of the armed forces to vote in the 1944 elections."

The committee also urged the Young Democrats of America to make a similar recommendation to Congress "in order to maintain national unity in respect to our armed forces."

The committee adopted the resolution after John Padden of Crookston, Minn., vice chairman of the federation, said:

"The situation calls for Republicans and Democrats in Congress to unite and cooperate in establishing methods for soldier voting that, unlike the proposed legislation recently rejected by the Senate, will not be susceptible of political manipulation."

The Senate, in rejecting proposals for Federal supervision of balloting contained in the Green-Lucas soldier vote bill, placed the responsibility on the various States.

Postwar Policy Indorsed

The federation also indorsed the principles of policy adopted by the Republican Postwar Advisory Council at Mackinac Island and urged that the federation's chairman be appointed to the council to represent the youth of the party.

Mrs. Gypsie Webb Corbin, Ashland, Ky., federation chairman, told the committee that a Republican victory in 1944, "like a garden, can be harvested if it is cultivated by hard work."

Tydings Attacks Plan

Baltimore, Dec. 12 (AP).—Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, said today that Federal legislation to permit persons in military services to vote "would be a farce and a sham" and that only States could provide a "sure and legal way" for them to participate in elections.

Tydings said he would "aid in every possible way in having Maryland provide this right to vote to all Marylanders" in service, but that Federal permission was unconstitutional.

Eden to Report On Conferences Before Commons

London, Dec. 12 (AP).—The House of Commons will hold a two-day debate on the conduct of the war at its next series of sittings, with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden reporting on the three Middle East conferences among President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and President Inonu of Turkey.

Churchill is not expected to address Commons until early in the new year.

The Sunday Times said Eden would see Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Premier of the Polish government-in-exile, this week to report on the Teheran conferences at which broken Polish-Russian relations were discussed.

Tulsa Grand Jury Reports $1,300,000 Textbook Swindle

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 12 (INS).—Charges that Oklahoma taxpayers had been "swindled" out of more than $1,300,000 by "representatives of certain textbook companies and a number of trusted public servants," were given residents of Oklahoma today by the Tulsa grand jury.

The charges were made by the jury in a final report returned late Saturday after it concluded a 10-week investigation into alleged State-wide textbook scandals.

The report also included indictments against eight prominent State officials and citizens accusing them of conspiracy to defraud in causing certain textbooks to be adopted for use in State schools.

Those indicted included Dr. Henry G. Bennett, president of Oklahoma A. and M. College at Stillwater, of whom the grand jurymen's report stated:

"It is our unanimous opinion that the best interests of the State of Oklahoma and Oklahoma A. and M. College would be served if Dr. Bennett were . . . replaced by some well-qualified educator. . . ."

Officers Ruled Eligible for Political Races

Knox if an officer who would be "drafted" may accept the nomination, and remain in the armed forces "during an election campaign in which he takes no part."

The Cabinet officers said, the Senator added, that no policy or regulation prevented that, and a man so nominated and elected could resign his commission or, if eligible, retire.

Willkie came forth yesterday with a vigorous plea to be allowed to defend himself before the Senate.

Willkie was described as eager to answer the vote-buying allegations written by C. Nelson Sparks, former Mayor of Akron, in a book "One Man—Wendell Willkie." In addition Willkie was understood to be preparing data on the background of some of his critics.

Kilgore Seeks Consultation

Chairman Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia, told a reporter he was glad Willkie was "willing to cooperate" but added that he wanted to consult with other elections subcommittee members before fixing any time for consideration of the resolution by Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota, calling for an inquiry into alleged "irregularities" at the 1940 convention.

Senator Tunnell (Democrat) of Delaware, said he had no objection to hearing anything Willkie wanted to say, but that it would be necessary for the committee to have more information before it decided on hearings. The Langer resolution also would provide for an inquiry into the conduct of the 1940 Democratic convention, if committee members thought it advisable.

The Langer proposal, citing charges that attempts were made to "purchase the support of the Arizona delegation for the nomination of Wendell Willkie" at the 1940 meeting, has not been acted upon by the Senate and no formal inquiry could be held without full Senate approval.

The subcommittee, however, might decide to hear witnesses to determine whether it was worthwhile to conduct an investigation.

Speed Action On Subsidies, Jones Pleads

Senator Danaher (Republican) Connecticut insisted the Senate dispose of the question as soon as possible to remove uncertainty from the future plans of Government agencies which have been handling subsidies and food production programs. The subsidy outlaw clause is tied to a bill extending the life of the CCC which expires December 31. The CCC is the financial agent for several subsidies.

Subsidy opponents, confident they have the votes to smash the system by which the Government pays growers and processors in cash so it can keep down retail prices, also opposed Ellender's attempt to delay the vote.

House interest was focused on efforts of a powerful bloc to strip the Office of Price Administration of control over oil and coal prices and turn them over to Interior Secretary Ickes.

Oil Vote Today

The House will vote today on a discharge petition to force immediate action on the bill shifting OPA's oil price authority. If the move to by-pass House committees proves successful, the House will vote on the measure itself tomorrow. Coal State legislators plan to offer an amendment to include that fuel in the shift.

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee will begin hearings today on a resolution approving an 8 cents an hour increase in pay for 1,100,000 nonoperating railway workers. The Senate approved the measure last week by the overwhelming vote of 74 to 4, despite the bitter protests of President Roosevelt's stabilization directors.

Also on Agenda

Also on the Capitol Hill agenda are:

Taxes—The Senate Finance Committee probably will complete work this week on a new tax bill carrying considerably less revenue than in the form it was passed by the House, and far short of the Administration's goal of more than 10 billion dollars.

Soldier's discharge pay—The Senate Military Committee has approved a bill calling for mustering out pay for servicemen on a scale ranging from $200 to $500. The House Military Committee is considering similar legislation. Action probably will be completed before adjournment of Congress.

Soldiers' vote—An attempt is under way in the House to work out a compromise to assure soldiers a vote in the November election without infringing upon States' rights. The Senate turned control of the voting over to the States, discarding a measure which would have set up a Federal commission to arrange for the balloting.

Food—The House Agriculture Committee is pressing the Rules Committee for immediate action on its measure to create a war food czar with control over prices as well as production and distribution. This move—a blow aimed at OPA—has the backing of the Republican Food Study Committee in the House.

Nazi Invasion Fleet Hidden in Finland

Stockholm, Dec. 12 (INS).—The German invasion fleet once massed off the Netherlands to attack Britain now is dispersed in Finnish ports, according to sources here today.

The fleet, consisting of barges and transports, was taken to German Baltic ports after the battle of Britain convinced the Germans an invasion would fail. Now it has been sent to Finland to prevent its possible destruction in Allied bombing attacks on Nazi ports, it was learned.

Toil, Blood, Sweat and Turkey —For Marines in Solomons

Bougainville, Solomon Islands, Nov. 24 (Delayed) (AP).—The long line of dirt-caked Marines struggled wearily through the jungle.

Two men half dragged a third, a victim of mortar shell concussion.

Here and there men wobbled along with stretcher cases; others with less serious wounds plodded ahead under their own power.

At first none paid any heed to the stream of sweat-soaked men moving in the opposite direction—toward the front. But there was something unusual about them which finally demanded attention.

Turkey drumsticks. Thanksgiving dinner. In a stinking jungle!

The frontward bound men bit off great chunks of meat. They nibbled at the shreds around the joints. They chewed off the particles of gristle. They sucked the bones clean.

The back-tracking Marines stared.

"Is there turkey back there?" one asked, incredulously.

"Sure, plenty of it," mouthed a buddy, grinning over his drumstick. "I heard the LST's (tank landing ships) brought in 54,000 pounds. I don't know how they got it up here but they did."

The wounded brightened noticeably. The whole line quickened.

"Jees," muttered the shell-shocked boy. "Turkey!"

Some of these boys had been in the front lines 20 days, without hot food. Turkey!

When they reached the battalion command post, they found excited men, sweating men, bandaged men, men on stretchers, concussion victims, crowding eagerly about the mess tent. Turkey!

There was no cranberry sauce. No fluffy white mashed potatoes. No smooth, brown gravy. No mince pie.

Library Holds Its Dedication

High diplomatic, congressional and Administration officials attended dedication ceremonies of the Florence Bayard Hilles Library at the Alva Belmont House of the National Women's Party at 114 B st. ne. yesterday afternoon.

The only feminist library in the world, it was named in honor of Mrs. Hilles of Wilmington, Del., who was one of the women imprisoned for the picketing of the White House during the national fight for women suffrage.

The library is in the old coach house of the mansion which was presented to the Woman's Party by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, former president of the group.

Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, was the principal speaker at the dedication ceremonies. Muna Lee of the State Department introduced the speakers. Alice Paul, chairman of the National Women's Party, formally named the library and Mrs. Hilles responded. The dedication was featured by a musical program and was folowed by a reception.

McLeish declared, "Capitol Hill is fast becoming the library center of the world. When the Surgeon General's Library joins with the Library of Congress and the Law Library, and the Folger Shakespearean Library, there wil be no similar area which will encompass such an accumulation of literature."

Clinching The Point

If the Senate District Committee had hired an expert in publicity to dramatize the absurdity of the local government setup, he could scarcely have done better than to order the reporting of the seven bills which came out of that committee on Friday. During the week the committee had listened to pleas for a local District government to relieve Congress of its present arduous duties as a city council. Then it found itself under the necessity of passing bills to permit the installation of steam-heating pipes under a street, to increase penalties for violation of the insurance code, to provide for clearance of land titles after tax-deed sales, to change the name of a street, to approve a hospital corporation, to grade local restaurants, and to give the superintendent of insurance control over fire and casualty rates.

Most of these trivialities could readily be disposed of by a city council with ordinary municipal powers. But they are forced through the bottleneck of the greatest national legislature in the world. Congress is under pressure from a hundred issues of national and international significance. Yet it has to mess around with legislation permitting the installation of pipes under a street. Here is one of the greatest travesties in the history of government. It is inexcusably wasteful of the time and talents of Congress. To use a $25,000,000 legislature for enactment of such petty local measures is equivalent to building a Pentagon to house a dozen filing cabinets. How long will it take Congress to see that the denial of local government to the District is a foolish imposition upon itself and a symbol of gross inefficiency that helps to bring Congress into disrepute?

Kelly Case

Starting with the investigation of a liquor complaint and a subsequent raid on the El Patio Club owned by Larry Kelly, treasurer of the building fund of the Building Laborers and Hod Carriers Local Union, No. 74, a special District grand jury began an investigation last May of the local's tangled financial affairs. Although Mr. Kelly himself has long been a fugitive from the grand jury, information supplied by other witnesses has moved the grand jury to ask for an extension of its term for another three months.

The El Patio's liquor cache, paid for in part by checks totaling more than $19,000 drawn against the local union's building fund, and the two cafes built with union funds, from which Mr. Kelly is reported to have extracted handsome profits, are only samples of the kind of transactions that the grand jury has been investigating. The detailed list of accusations against Mr. Kelly is a dismaying story but the chief importance of the grand jury inquiry grows out of the light it may throw upon the loose financial practices of some union officials, the lack of responsible supervision, and the helplessness of the membership to correct conditions that call for disciplinary action.

The matter of chief public interest is not how much money the local union lost by putting itself at the mercy of an unscrupulous officer but why such things happen and how they can be prevented from recurring. If the grand jury looks far enough, it will undoubtedly find that the basic cause of dissipation of funds lies in the character of the union's financial setup and the lack of control by the rank and file over their supposed representatives. It makes one's blood boil to read of the fees, and special assessments collected from hardworking men to feed union treasuries that may be raided at will by gangsters masquerading as friends of labor. It is even more infuriating that labor leaders and politicians who profess to be friends of organized labor should resist efforts to compel union officials to render a public accounting of their trusteeship.

In the present case, a financial accounting confined to Local 74 is not enough. The loose practices of which certain members complained were tacitly condoned by the obstructive tactics of the dictator-head of the powerful International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union numbering 450,000 members. That organization, which secures its funds from assessments of member locals, is managed by an executive board that for 30 years perpetuated itself in office by electing its own members. President Moreschi of the international organization not only receives a substantial salary but has an unlimited expense account. Serious accusations have been brought against him, too, for alleged attempts to whitewash Kelly and his clique, for trying to rig the local elections to assure retention of discredited officials and for obstructing the efforts of members of the local union to obtain a financial accounting. Thus it appears that a local union scandal may well take on national proportions and force home the need for public regulation of union finances.

Emden Victory

The action in the skies above the German port of Emden Saturday appears, on the basis of available details, to have been the greatest American aerial victory of the war in the European theater. The exact scale of the victory, of course, cannot be estimated since the number of American bomber and fighter planes participating is withheld, but the proportion of losses was evidently very low. At the same time, the announced destruction of 138 enemy fighters as against the loss of 17 bombers and three fighters by the attacking force is evidence enough that a crippling blow has been dealt to the Luftwaffe. If the Germans were unable to endure continued losses on such a scale in the Battle of Britain, they are far less able to endure them today.

From the strategic standpoint, the apparently terrific damage inflicted by the Fortresses and Liberators on the German naval base is probably less important than the damage to the Luftwaffe. Even more significant is the fact that all but 21 of the German planes destroyed were shot down by the bombers. This would indicate either that the bombers were present in tremendous force or that such technical defensive improvements as the new gun turrets have made the Fortresses and Liberators more than a match for the Messerschmitts and Junkers, for all their much-advertised rocket guns. Of these two factors, however, numerical strength is almost certainly the more important.

It is also evident that the recent lull in the air war over Germany has been due wholly to unfavorable weather, which is of course even more of a deterrent to the daylight operations of the American bombers than to the night bombing operations of the RAF. The statements made by General Arnold in Italy show that there has been no important revision or modification of the round-the-clock program. Indeed, General Arnold said that it is hoped to enlarge this program into what he called "360-degree bombing," with aerial attacks at all hours and from every angle of approach. If these attacks do not actually knock Germany out of the war, the general said, they will render her almost impotent to resist the land invasion when it comes.

General Arnold's statements were pretty well echoed by another air officer, Brig. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay, who until recently was a divisional commander in General Arnold's Eighth Air Force. In an interview at San Francisco General Lemay disclosed that the ratio of German to American fighter plane losses in the battles over the Continent has been about four to one. And while both General Arnold and General Lemay appear to accept the official War Department view that a land invasion is necessary, it begins to appear that, if it follows a whole series of victories like Emden, the invasion may be far less expensive in blood than we have been led to fear.

Fight Over Slums

We are pleased to note that housing in Washington has once more become a major topic of discussion. There is an enormous job to be done in reclaiming decayed areas of the city and in providing decent housing for all the people. As soon as the shortage of materials and manpower permits, this problem ought to be attacked with greater vigor than it has ever before commanded. Careful planning for that work is an obvious necessity.

It is especially gratifying, we think, that private industry is taking a more active interest in building houses for low-income groups. That is a movement of infinite promise. For many years The Post has applauded the efforts of private builders, many of them working through FHA-insured mortgages, to bring modern housing within reach of wage earners. A few months ago we gave a hearty indorsement to the idea behind Senator Wagner's land-reclamation bill. Large parts of Washington are in desperate need of replanning and rebuilding. The planning will have to be done by a public agency, but much of the building can undoubtedly be done, as Waverly Taylor pointed out at the annual meeting of the Washington Housing Association on Saturday, by private enterprise. The necessities of wartime have taught private builders new methods. They have encouraged large-scale housing developments. We think that Congress may well consider further liberalization of the terms on which mortgage loans may be made for large-scale low-rental projects in the postwar period.

But we also believe that a frontal attack on public housing is not the way to promote this great experiment in city building. To date some sponsors of this idea have given the impression that they are more interested in destroying public housing agencies than in adding to the sum total of good housing available to the public. They ought to remember that housing, as Mrs. Roosevelt told the Housing Association, "is not just a commercial enterprise—it concerns the city as a whole and . . . the country as a whole."

Society has an intense interest in freeing itself from the crime, disease and degeneration that flourish in the slums. As a matter of self-protection, it must strive to wipe out the conditions that tend to keep people in slime, poverty and degradation from one generation to the next. It is now an accepted fact that actual destruction of the slums is the only way to eliminate their influence. And before slums can be destroyed decent housing for slum dwellers must be provided. We now know that public housing can provide this community need. The Post sincerely hopes that private industry will be able to do a larger share of the job in the future. But that remains to be demonstrated. In the meantime it would be incredibly shortsighted to cut off the progress that has already been made. What we need is more good housing by both private enterprise and public agencies, each operating within its respective field.

Bond Redemptions

The Post is in receipt of a statement from the promotional research section of the Treasury's War Finance Division calling attention to the fact that nearly 94 per cent of the funds invested in war savings bonds E, F and G are still held by investors. Redemptions for the entire period amount to only $1,562,000,000, while the cumulative sales total exceeds $24,570,000,000. This showing unfortunately leaves the impression that the war savings bonds present no redemption problems; that people are just borrowing trouble by wondering what will happen if any large amount of these bonds should be offered for redemption. We think the War Finance Division's promotion experts would have performed a more useful service for the Treasury and for the people of the country if they had stressed the disturbing fact that redemptions of war savings bonds have taken a sharp spurt upward since the Treasury began to withhold income taxes at source, last July.

Yesterday the OWI released a statement showing that in September the amount of war bond redemptions totaled $148,500,000, compared with $25,900,000 a year ago. Since July 1, moreover, it is estimated that redemptions have amounted to about 13 per cent of total sales compared with an average of 3½ per cent for the year preceding July 1. In November estimated redemptions amounted to almost a fourth of total sales. These figures indicate that a good part of the money currently borrowed from the public through sales of war bonds is currently being paid out again to the public. The anti-inflationary effect of war bond sales paid for out of savings is experienced only so long as investors refrain from exercising their right to redeem their bonds for cash. Unquestionably the attractiveness of the war savings bonds, the willingness of the public to buy them, despite their low yields, have been enhanced by the offer of the Government to redeem them after a brief holding period. However, the advantage of the redeemability feature from the viewpoint of the Government will become a positive liability if holders of the war bonds continue to "cash in" their bonds on a large scale. The Treasury's promotion experts would be well advised, therefore, to abandon complacency and turn their attention to the problem of arresting the rather alarming tendency of the public to convert their bonds into cash.

Postwar Goals

General Motors Corporation, says the chairman of its board, Alfred P. Sloan, will spend a half billion dollars to reconvert its plants to automobile production after the war. That is "good news." There is still better news, however, in Mr. Sloan's recognition of the challenging nature of the tasks that will confront private industry during the period of transition from war to peace.

Mr. Sloan joined other spokesmen for industry in urging the Government to clear away the uncertainty as to the policies to be followed in facilitating reconversion. But the unique character of his contribution lay in his recognition of the fact that private industry itself will be on trial after this war. It must be prepared to make good its belief that the postwar economic life of the country will be best served by a reversion to the practices of a free economy, temporarily abandoned because of war. "Making good," as Mr. Sloan understands it, means not merely operating at a profit or supplying consumers with products for which they are willing to pay. It implies operating at a rate that will provide maximum employment. That, in turn, calls for expanding production and higher standards of living.

We have acquired an enormously increased productive capacity and improved our techniques for purposes of destruction. Can private industry effectively employ these legacies of war for purposes of peace? That is the issue raised in Mr. Sloan's address. He does not make the mistake of assuming that the answer rests entirely with the Government. Nor is he so short-sighted as to clamor for immediate removal of controls over industry when peace arrives. Instead he concedes that it would be far better to continue price and production controls for a time until "production develops a better balance and the law of supply and demand can operate freely again." His advice to industry reflects a sound and balanced attitude, without overstressing grievances and with appropriate emphasis on the responsibilities of industry to the public that it serves.

EVERY HOUR

We all were out picking elderberries,
One of those lusty September days,
To make sure of January jellies
(And every hour a soldier dies).

We come on our bicycles from the factory,
Moist with our sweat and the dusky dews,
Saying: "That raid was just introductory
(And every hour a soldier dies)."

Seldom and thrifty our entertainment,
Too prone to lengthen our morning doze.
Our hearts drip blood, which is no atonement
(And every hour a soldier dies).

More About Soldier Votes

By Mark Sullivan

Some Difficulties

ABOUT SOLDIER voting, the legislative situation is simple—even though the controversy over it is both complex and heated. The Senate rejected a bill providing for soldier voting by means of a process set up by the Federal Government. Having rejected that, the Senate then passed a bill putting soldier voting wholly in the hands of the States—with the Federal Government not participating (except that the Army and Navy are directed to cooperate with the States in such mechanical details as distributing ballots.)

This bill is now in the House Committee on Elections. The House Committee seems to favor it, by a considerable majority. However, members of the committee are under pressure from persons who want the Federal Government to have a larger hand. It seems probable that the House Committee will indorse the bill passed by the Senate. There is no fixed date for the committee to act, and no sign how soon they will act. After the committee acts, the bill will go before the House as a whole. There it may or may not be amended; or it may be amended drastically or only slightly. The present probability is that, in spite of commotion, the House will pass the measure in much the same form as the Senate.

The reason for this probability is one outstanding condition, impossible to avoid facing. This condition is that no matter what Congress does, the States must act to provide for soldier voting. Even if the original bill for Federal action, which the Senate rejected, were revived and passed, it would still be necessary for the States to act.

IN THE ELECTIONS next year, there will be voting for two kinds of officials—for Federal officials and State and county officials. It was for Federal officials only—President, Vice President, members of Congress—that the original Senate bill provided. That bill made no provision whatever for State and local officials—Governors, members of Legislature, sheriffs, school directors.

The reason for this distinction is constitutional. There may be basis for the claim that the Federal Government can act about voting for Federal officials. Some assert that it can. It was on this assumption that the original Senate bill provided for soldiers to vote for Federal officials. But it was not claimed that the Federal Government could act upon voting for purely local officials.

Had the original Senate bill been enacted, we should have had a strange situation. Soldiers would have been given complete facilities, by the Federal Government, to vote for Federal officials—but no facilities to vote for their local sheriffs and members of the Legislature. This brings us to a main argument for leaving soldier voting wholly to the States, as provided by the bill now pending. If the States are to provide facilities for the soldier to vote for local officials, why not, by the same action and the same machinery, provide the facilities for soldiers to vote for President and other Federal officials. Why make two functions of it, a State function and a Federal function? Why not have it all done by the States—with all the names for all officials, Federal and local, printed on the same ballot? That is the way it is done now, in ordinary voting. What is needed is that the same process be extended to soldier voting.

SOME STATES have already provided for soldier voting—they did so in connection with the elections of 1942. But many States will need to set up new machinery for soldier voting. Some States may need to make changes in their election laws having to do with party primaries and conventions. In a few States, primaries or conventions are held, and candidates named by the parties, as late as September. This would probably be too late to send ballots to soldiers serving in distant points overseas, and get the ballots back by election day.

Incidentally, soldier voting seems to be an impediment to a frequently discussed proposal in connection with the national conventions of the two parties next year. It has been agreed that, in order to shorten the presidential campaign, the two parties hold their conventions in August or September—instead of the customary dates, mid-June for the Republicans, late June for the Democrats. But if presidential nominations were made as late as September, the time would be short for printing ballots, distributing them to soldiers, and getting them back by election day. The other alternative—to have soldier ballots dribbling in for weeks after election day, leaving the result of the election in doubt—would be seriously unfortunate.

Quiz Column

If Dr. Cutter would take the time necessary to write the mechanical equations of motion, or better yet, if he actually performed the experiment, he would find that an iron ball rolls down an incline at exactly the same rate as a wooden ball of the same size, contrary to the answer he gives to question 8 of his quiz column in last Sunday's Post.

European Politics

By Paul Schubert

Problems Of Tomorrow

JUGOSLAVIA'S SUBTERRANEAN political pot is all a-bubble, sending gusts of steam and rumbling earthquakes up to the surface of the outer world. Josip Broz, leader of guerillas, is now hailed as a field marshal. The Partisans claim to be the true "government" of Yugoslavia—they name a "premier" and aim fiery statements at the exiled government of King Petar, including young Petar himself in their denunciations. Petar's government replies by saying that the Partisan actions "don't count." Rival guerilla leader and Secretary of War Mikhailovich calls upon all Yugoslavs under arms to obey his orders.

This state of affairs is nothing new in Yugoslavia. It is the normal state of Yugoslavia politics, chronically marked by violence verging upon the revolutionary, by assassinations and suppressions, by conspiracies and factionalism between right and left, between Serb and Croat, between Croat and Slovene, between Serb and Hungarian, between Serb and Germany, between gendarme and citizen, citizen and police, Orthodox Catholic and Roman Catholic. . . .

IN EUROPE such political instability is usually referred to with a shrug as "Balkan" and accepted as inevitable.

In the United States it is taken more seriously, because many of the factions have connections and outlets among Yugoslavs who have emigrated to America, and who take the politics of their native land with deadly factional seriousness. Men like Mr. Louis Adamic are in Yugoslav politics up to the ears, and lend their talents to ambitious schemes of organized propaganda financed in this country and widely distributed to all those who deal with public opinion.

We are told that unless "Tito" is boss of Yugoslavia the world will go to the dogs. In the next mail we learn that unless King Petar and the Yugoslav "government in exile" continue in power, all Europe will revert to anarchy. But these are not the only factions in Yugoslavia, though they may be the most articulate at the moment.

We shall see much more of this sort of thing before the present messy state of the world relapses into anything that can truly be called "peace." Nor is it confined to the Balkans — to Yugoslavia, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania.

It goes as far west as France and Spain. Italy is ridden by it. Poland is ripe for it. Czechoslovakia, relatively mature in a political way, is none the less factionalized. Once the iron hand of the Gestapo is removed from the Germans, there will be political explosion in the Reich.

FACTIONALISM HAS been the curse of European politics for a century and more. Few Americans realize that to the average European, politics means factionalism. The European accepts the multi-party system, clings to it, fights for it—and sees as the only alternative, not a two-party system, but a one-party system.

The wave of European dictatorships that followed the war of 1914-18, was largely an effort to stabilize faction-torn parliamentary systems.

I once watched at close hand the election for Starosta (Mayor) in a mid-European village of some 600 population. The office paid $75 a year and meant a lot of hard work. In return it brought honor, and perhaps a little graft (though there couldn't have been much).

Nine men competed for election. The campaign lasted for several weeks. The parties represented were Agrarian, Social-Democrat, Christian-Socialist Catholic-Communist and various other factions and shades of political coloring. All the candidates took themselves with deadly seriousness, and there was endless undercover negotiating. Before the election was held, enough bad feeling had been engendered to last until the next election time.

A factor frequently overlooked in this country, when present-day European politics is under discussion, is the strong undercover survival of the monarchical idea.

King Petar still "rules" Yugoslavia.

Other kings, in other countries, would like to get back upon the throne. They and their followers are an ever-present force, partly for selfish reasons, partly because of a natural belief in the beneficence of "aristocratic" rule. In Spain and France, in Germany and Austria, in Italy and in most of the lesser countries, the "crown" is a factor to be reckoned with, notably because in a great many instances the church, consciously or unconsciously, aids in the movement—and because when times are hard, many citizens forget the past and remember monarchical days as "Good old times."

European politics is an unadulterated headache. It is important for us to avoid factional connection with them.

Slum Clearance

The citizens of Washington who read the December 8 editorial in The Post, entitled "Plumping for Slums," must have been amazed at the bitter denunciation of the Housing and Rent Control Committee's report on Housing and Slum Reclamation, which was adopted by the Federation of Citizens Association at the regular monthly meeting on December 4.

This editorial, considered in the true light of the facts and recommendations set forth in the report, makes it a most unfair presentation of an extremely important Washington question for which everyone wishes a solution.

Your attention is called to the fact that in a seven-year period before the war, from 1934 to 1941, only 14 squares of inhabited alleys in Washington were cleared out of approximately 200 such squares. This work was done by the Alley Dwelling Authority or what is now known as the National Capital Housing Authority. This was the seven years prior to the war when the work of clearing alleys was by law required to be 70 per cent completed. It is found as just stated, that the work was only 7 per cent completed. Is there any wonder that the citizens do not wish the agency charged with the original work of clearing inhabited alleys to continue in operation?

The editorial stated, "The committee's proposal would simply mean that the wretched hovels which now spread disease, vice and vermin through the city would remain untouched, or that their inhabitants would be put out on the streets with no place to go."

This is a ridiculous statement to make about any citizen interested in low-cost housing, but when Section 4, Paragraph (b) of the report is considered, it is an utter falsehood.

(b) "A program encouraging private enterprise to construct low-rent housing should be instituted. That program should include long-term financing, possibly for 50 to 60 years duration, and tenants should be supplied through contracts, agreements, or rent certificates of the local public welfare agency, to all private builders who will agree to provide such housing under the minimum standards of construction and maximum rent level set by the Slum Clearance Board. The timing of such construction should be controlled by the Slum Clearance Board in consultation with the Public Welfare Agency so as to coincide with the progress of slum clearance and the availability of funds for the subsidization of tenants to the necessary extent."

The question has been raised that private enterprise has not cleared slums and provided housing for slum occupants. This is true in the large concept, although private enterprise has materially contributed in the past in a manner comparable to the work of public housing agencies. However, private enterprise has not had the advantages given to public housing agencies of low interest rates, long-term financing, the power of eminent domain, subsidized tenants and tax exemption.

We ask that this machinery be made available, except tax exemption, to private enterprise and the job of slum reclamation and of low-cost housing will be done where public housing failed as proven by the record. This work will also be done at a great deal less expense to the taxpayer.

JOSEPH H. DECKMAN,
Chairman.
Housing and Rent Control Committee, Federation of Citizens Association.

Regarding Reuters

The recent unfortunate incident of the premature release of the Reuters dispatch on the Cairo conference is reprehensible and deserving of public censure for several reasons.

It is easy to understand the perfectly natural temptation to break the release dateline which that famous news organization must have felt in the person of its Lisbon Bureau chief, especially with rumors and news hints being emitted by radio sources on such a meeting. Nevertheless, it may be said with some justice, that, had this very human temptation been resisted, in the public interest, then Reuters in general and Mr. Douglas Brown in particular, would have been more deserving of public admiration both here and abroad.

This release has brought the very natural and proper objection of Mr. Elmer Davis of our Office of War Information. First, because it serves to set a bad precedent and helps to break down the operative policy of secrecy which we have sought to establish both here and abroad concerning vital war news. Then, too, it introduces misunderstanding among the Allies. In short, it helps Hitler.

Further, it is to be assumed that there is, or, if not, there should be, some responsible central controlling authority in an organization of the caliber of Reauters, so that it would not be necessary to condone "spontaneous journalistic enterprise" on the part of one of its chief agents. If such is not the case, now, then in the interests of the Allies, in the interest of international good will and the maintenance of journalistic ethics and understanding, there should be.

The safety and protection of the persons of Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin and the interests of the Allied cause might have counseled any right minded newsman to exercise proper control in this matter and here let it be noted, is meant not merely one but all. Either we win together or we fail separately. Hitler knows that.

Posting The Books

By J. M. Lalley

Mr. Jefferson

"THE COMPLETE JEFFERSON," assembled and arranged by Saul K. Padover. (Duell, Sloane & Pearce, $5.)

Dr. Padover has dedicated this compilation to a lady named Irina, who, he says, "can never get enough of Jefferson." One may suppose, however, that this heroic volume, which runs to exactly 1300 pages (plus bibliography and index), and weighs just under 4 pounds, will keep her appeased for a time, at least. It contains all Jefferson's important papers, except his letters, and even includes a good many exerpts from those.

No one, it seems to me, who plows through this book will deny that Jefferson was the most remarkable man of his remarkable age, the greatest figure not merely of the American Revolution but of the whole Enlightenment. Two things in particular must awe and amaze the reader. One of course is the well-nigh limitless range of Mr. Jefferson's intellectual interests; beside him Leonardo da Vinci seems a narrow specialist. There seems to have been more of systematically assorted information on a greater variety of subjects behind Mr. Jefferson's forehead than in the whole of M. Diderot's Encyclopedie. Mr. Jefferson could dash off a project for the reform of Old English orthography, or a catalogue of the flora and fauna of Virginia, or a discussion of the practicability of submarine boats, or a theory of English prosody, or a design for a hemp-smashing machine, or a judicious comparison of French and Italian table wines, with far less travail than is exacted from most of us in filling out an income-tax form. Indeed, when one comes to think of it, the greatest of all Mr. Jefferson's great accomplishments—one equivalent to all 12 labors of Hercules—was in persuading Secretary Gallatin to adopt treasury forms that would be readily comprehensible "to every man of any mind" in the country.

The other amazing thing is Mr. Jefferson's literary industry. The quantitative total of his writings puts to shame the record of many professional writers who have never taken time out for revolutions or terms in public office. When you remember that Mr. Jefferson wrote it all with crude quill pens, and much of it no doubt by candlelight, in a calliagraphy of which few are capable nowadays, the thing becomes more impressive than ever.

Mr. Jefferson's literary style is a pretty good sample of the order of English prose called "Augustan." In both syntax and vocabulary it shows the effects of a classical diet; Mr. Jefferson was the kind of 18th century scholar who scorned Gibbon as (no offense, Dr. Padover!) a mere "compiler," and took his Roman history neat from Polybius, Livy, Suetonius, Tacitus and Cassius Dio, with Plutarch, Sallust and Dyonisius by way of a chaser. Mr. Jefferson's prose has, besides lucidity, a sedate and affable rhythm. If it is less majestic than Gibbon's, it is also less brittle and artificial than Addison's, and he resisted the tendency to excessive periphrasis which was a disease with so many 18th century writers, especially political writers, and of which the Federalist Papers offer so many irritating examples. The Jeffersonian prose may be observed at its best in the preamble and conclusion of the Declaration of Independence, in several passages of the Notes on the State of Virginia and in many of the letters and journal entries written in France. Never, however, does Mr. Jefferson's prose rise to that high eloquence of which Mr. Lincoln was occasionally capable.

In his large and many-sided intelligence, Mr. Jefferson had blind spots. One of these, apparently, was humor. He was not perhaps altogether insensible to humor in other men, but there is nothing in his own work that suggests playfulness or even irony; this defect becomes a bit painful wherever he has attempted to paraphrase one or another of Dr. Franklin's famous anecdotes. The same shortcoming allowed him, when writing in his capacity of Great White Father to his children, the Indians, to try to blend some of the characteristic Indian apostrophes and incantations with his own grave and Ciceronian periods. And he could write a page, or two, in words borrowed from the Greek and Latin, of praise for a plan of reviving the Anglo-Saxon.

Mr. Jefferson had his crotchets, too, and one of these seems to have been Plato. Evidently he considered Plato a kind of philosophical Federalist or hierophantic Hamilton and blamed him for whatever was wrong with anything. I cannot find the accusation in so many words, but I have the impression Mr. Jefferson considered Plato the real inventor of laws of attainder, standing armies, protective tariffs, established churches and star chamber governments and all the other political goblins of his day.

There is one word that is scarcely to be found anywhere in this book, and that is "democracy." Nor is there much to show that Jefferson thought of his political philosophy as democratic, even as that term was construed in his own day. His temperament was aristocratic and epicurean. In a letter to Mr. John Adams he explains that he has championed the aristocracy of the virtuous and talented against the pseudo-aristocracy of money and privilege. Thus the best form of government is the one which "provides most effectually for a pure selection of the neutral aristoi into the seats of government." But on the evidence in this book there is hardly much doubt that Mr. Jefferson would regard our modern American democracy with the utmost horror and would see in its tremendous concentrations of wealth and power the absolute triumph, under republican trappings, of the false aristocrats.

Traveling Presidents

By Ernest Lindley

From Versailles To Teheran

IT IS HARD now to believe that President Wilson was criticized a quarter of a century ago for leaving the United States to attend the Versailles Conference. On practical grounds he may have erred. He might have obtained a better peace, or might have forestalled some of the attacks made on him, by sitting fast in Washington. But he was criticized at the time not only for errors in political judgment, but for the simple fact that he went outside the United States to take a direct hand in making the peace.

LINDLEY

Since then a good many miles have slipped under cruisers and transport planes. If President Roosevelt has been criticized for going abroad to confer directly with the representatives of other nations, the fact has escaped the attention of this column. The only misgivings publicly expressed have been by those who fear that he is taking unnecessary personal risks.

Ten years ago possibly Mr. Roosevelt himself would have thought his participation in a meeting of heads of government in Cairo or Teheran out of the question, for practical political reasons alone. A little later, before the war, when he toyed with the idea of meeting Stalin and Mussolini and possibly even Hitler, the fancied scene of the gathering was on the high seas or at some point midway between America and Eurasia.

IT IS INTERESTING to recall how gradually he wore down the prejudice against the Chief Executive's leaving the United States. He began with excursions to the old family summering place in New Brunswick, to Canada, the Caribbean area, and the islands off the western coast of the heimsphere. After the 1936 election he went to South America to attend the Inter-American conference at Buenos Aires.

His first meeting with Churchill took place on the waters of the Atlantic, for which the conference and its proclamation were named, but on this side, off the shore of North America. Since then he has visited Canada again, and Mexico, Africa twice and the southern bridge between Europe and Asia in Persia. On his return trip he may well have set foot on the soil of Europe itself.

The airplane has enabled him to travel more expeditiously, although until he went to Casablanca, he had stuck to trains, automobiles, and boats. The radio and the cable are more largely responsible for his mobility. When he moves, even over tremendous distance, he is always within reach of the White House and so can discharge his official duties. Documents requiring his signature can be flown to him.

IT IS A SAFE prediction that the tradition that the President of the United States should not travel afar has been shattered forever.

The personal risks, especially in travel by air over routes which have not been fully developed as those within the United States, are not small. An accident might be a catastrophe, the weight of which perhaps would be more fully appreciated among our Allies than in the United States, where intensity of personal antagonism among certain groups tends to prevent a clear appreciation of Roosevelt's value to the Nation and the Allied cause as a symbol—apart from everything else. But the President himself has taken the view that the greatest personal contribution he can make at this stage is in tightening the bonds among the nations on which victory and the organization of the peace primarily depend.

Both war and peace are being made in these conferences. So far as the reaction of the people of the United States can be judged, they have confidence in the progress that has been made along this double road into the future. The principal criticisms have been in the form of innuendoes and apprehensive questioning.

The other nations of the world understand fully that while Roosevelt can make binding decisions as commander in chief, he cannot make binding commitments concerning the peace to follow. But our principal partners seem to be willing to take a chance on that. Their pledges and general behavior indicate that they yearn for a long, secure peace, which they know too, can be achieved only by complete victory and an enduring partnership of the great victorious powers.

The progress being made makes it increasingly less likely that there will ever be after this war a peace conference comparable to Versailles. There will be rather a network of agreements, informal and formal, some military, some made by the President in his capacity as the official charged by the Constitution with primary responsibility for conduct of international relations, some possibily requiring formal ratification by the Senate or the passage of concurrent resolution by a majority of both houses of Congress. The foundation of peace already has been laid and the structure is rising bit by bit.

Steinbeck Tells of Double Trick In Which 40 Men Took 87 Nazis

By John Steinbeck

When the lieutenant went up to the Germans with his bath towel for a white flag, the captain of paratroopers, peering through a crack between two building stones, watched him go. It was a courageous thing to do, and there seemed little chance of its success. The men hidden below saw the lieutenant challenged, and then they saw him led behind the white stone building.

STEINBECK

The watching men hardly breathed then. They were waiting for the crack of a rifle shot that would mean the plan for kidding the Germans into surrender had failed. The time went slowly. Actually, it was only about 15 minutes. Then the lieutenant appeared again, and this time he was accompanied by three German officers.

The watchers saw him walk down to a clear place in the path and there pause and point to the ground. Then two of the officers retired behind the white building again. But in a moment they reappeared, and behind them came the German soldiers. They straggled down the path and, at the place that had been indicated, they piled their arms, their rifles and machine guns, and even their pistols. The captain, lying behind his stones, watched and counted. He tallied the whole 87 men who were supposed to be there. He said to his lieutenant: "By God, he pulled it off!"

Locked in Ventotene Jail

And now a little pageant developed. As the Germans marched down the path, American paratroopers materialized out of the ground beside them, until they were closely surrounded by an honor guard of about 30 men. The whole group swung down the path and into the little white town that stood so high above the harbor of Ventotene.

Since Ventotene had been for hundreds of years an Italian prison island, there was no lack of place to put the prisoners. The top floor of what we would call a city hall was a big roomy jail, with four or five big cells. The column marched up the steps of the city hall and on up to the third floor, and then the Germans were split into three groups and one group was put into each of three cells, while the fourth cell was reserved for the officers. Then guards with tommy guns were posted at the doors of the cells and the conquest was over.

The lieutenant who had carried the white flag sat down on the steps of the city hall a little shakily. The captain sat down beside him. "Any trouble?" the captain asked.

"No. It was too easy. I don't believe it yet." He lighted a cigarette, and his shaking hand nearly put out the match.

"Wonderful job," the captain said. "But what are we going to do with them?"

"Won't the ships be back tonight?"

"I hope so, but suppose they don't get back. We can't let anybody get any sleep until we get rid of these babies."

Want to See Commander

A trooper lounged near. "Those Jerry officers are raising hell," he said. "They want to see the commanding officer, sir."

The captain stood up. "Better come with me," he told the lieutenant. "How many men did you tell them we had?"

"Six hundred," the lieutenant said, "and I forgot how many cruisers off shore."

The captain laughed. "One time I heard about an officer who marched 15 men around a house until they looked like an army. Maybe we better do that with our 40."

At the door of the officers' cell, the captain took out his pistol and handed it to one of the guards. "Leave the door open and keep your eye on us all the time. If they make a suspicious move, shoot them!"

"Yes, sir," said the guard, and he unlocked and opened the heavy door.

The German officers were at the barred window looking down on the deserted streets of the little town. They could see two lonely sentries in front of the building. The German oberlieutenant turned as the captain entered. "I demand to see the colonel," he said.

The captain swallowed. "Er—— the colonel? Well, he is engaged."

Angry at Being Tricked

For a long moment the German stared into the captain's eyes. Finally he said: "You are the commanding officer, aren't you?"

"Yes, I am," the captain said.

"How many men have you?"

"We do not answer questions," the captain said stiffly.

The German's face was hard and disappointed. "I think we have been tricked," he said. "I don't think you have 600 men. I think you have only a few more than 30 men."

The captain nodded solemnly. "Yes, you were tricked," he said. "But there isn't any need for trickery now. We've mined the building. If there is any trouble—any trouble at all, we'll blow the whole mess of you to hell." He turned to leave the cell. "You'll be taken aboard ship soon now," he said over his shoulder.

Going down the stairs, the lieutenant said: "Have you really mined the buildings?"

The captain grinned at him. "Have we really got 600 men?" he asked. And then he said: "Lord, I hope the destroyer gets in tonight to take these babies out. None of us is going to get any sleep until then."

Food Problem Growing Acute In Caribbean

By the Associated Press

Portraying dismal conditions in the Caribbean area, the United States section of the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission reported yesterday that the islands' problems "remain unfinished business challenging the combined efforts of the governments concerned."

This analysis by the United States members of the joint commission said the area is socially and economically out of step in a progressing Western Hemisphere and added that war conditions make it difficult "to maintain even the normal substandards of living.

The report of the joint commission, organized in 1942 to combat problems involving "the very economic existence of the islands," was published by the State Department.

Already in Last Notch

"The simple wartime formula 'tighten your belt' could not be applied to populations (nearly 14 million) whose belts had already been drawn to the last notch," the report observed.

The commission's efforts to aid the islanders, the report said, included stimulation of domestic production with the United States assuring purchase at fair prices of certain exportable foods needed in other islands.

Rationing also was instituted, exports controlled and steps taken to check rising living costs, partially through subsidy payments. Construction of U. S. air and naval bases and temporary movement of agricultural labor to the United States helped alleviate unemployment caused by war restrictions on commerce, the report added.

Lived From Ship to Ship

"These manifold problems, economic and social, were pressing from a purely humanitarian point of view," the report said. "Moreover, from the standpoint of the Four Freedoms for which we fight, they were secondary only to the actual military defense of the Caribbean region."

At one time, the analysis said, U-boats even "sailed brazenly into undefended harbors," destroyed shipping and shelled some places with the result that the islands' food reserves dropped so low that the residents lived "from ship to ship."

Postwar Work Will Be Ample, Study Says

Predictions of a large-scale unemployment problem in the demobilization period are not borne out by a study of postwar reemployment made public yesterday by the Brookings Institution.

Demobilization will be gradual extending probably over two or three years. Industrial reconversion and reemployment, which even now are under way, will be rapidy accelerated after the close of the European war, and from six to seven million servicemen and warworkers may well be demobilized before the end of the war in Asia. This gradual transition from war to peace production will greatly ease reemployment difficulties.

Victories In '44 and '45

"It is assumed," said the study, "that Germany will be defeated by the end of 1944, and Japan a year later. It is estimated that approximately 17.8 million persons may face demobilization during the first two and one-half years after the end of the European war. Of these, 9.5 million would be from the armed forces, 1.4 million from war agencies, and 6.9 million from munitions industries.

During the transition, the total number of available civilian workers will be appreciably smaller than in 1940, probably from one to two millions less, due to the fact that substantial numbers still will be in the armed forces, while many others will return to schools and colleges. The greater part of an abnormal increase of five million workers, including elderly persons, housewives, and others not normally employed will probably not wish to continue at work after the war.

Three Million Not Working

"In a large industrial Nation like the United States there inevitably will be several million laborers who are not employed at any given time. Even with the economic system functioning in a highly satisfactory manner, there would be a minimum of around 3 million not working.

"Reasonably full employment in 1947 would require an increase of roughly 8 million jobs, as compared with the actual employment level of 1940. To provide these jobs, expansion of employment will be necessary in all lines of private enterprise. Using the 1940 distribution of employment, with certain suggested modifications, the conclusion is reached that, of the additional 8 billion to be employed, approximately 2,400,000 would be in manufacturing, 1,600,000 in construction, 1,500,000 in services and the remainder scattered through different kinds of enterprise."

Carnegie Grant Reduction Found To Be Necessary

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—The Carnegie Corporation must either reduce the number of its grants, or the amounts involved, because of curtailed income due to prevailing low rates of interest, Walter A. Jessup, president, announced today.

Disclosing the corporation's current income is only three-fifths of what it was 10 years ago, Jessup announced that grants totaling $2,562,900 were made during the year to various agencies, including those promoting international understanding.

In the last 20 years, he said, communities spent $36,500,000 for the enlargement, improvement and replacement of public library buildings, originating from the gifts of $41,000,000 from the late Andrew Carnegie and the succeeding corporation.

Proposed Coal Wage Contract Seen Hampered by Conditions

By the Associated Press

The United Mine Workers and spokesmen for a major portion of the soft coal industry are agreed on the terms of a two-year wage contract, but the conditions attached are so multiple that it falls short of assuring mine peace for the war's duration.

The document submitted to Secretary Ickes Saturday maintains existing conditions of the Ickes-Lewis agreement but it is subject to three further actions before it becomes a binding contract. Even then there are several conditions which permit reopening.

Ickes summoned the joint conference of operators and miners to a meeting on Friday to act upon the agreement drafted by a subcommittee after two weeks of negotiations. This conference represents 67 per cent of the industry, on a tonnage basis. If approved by the full conference, or a substantial majority of the conferees, the agreement then will be subject to War Labor Board approval.

Conditioned on Price Rise

Another condition is that it shall become effective only after the OPA approves price increases "sufficient to cover the increased costs occasioned hereby." The operators consider a recent average increase of 17 cents a ton inadequate and called on Ickes for help in getting further advances.

If all conditions are met and a contract finally results, two important bases for reopening remain available. The contract may be reopened as to general wage rates on 30 days notice from either party at the end of the first contract year, March 31.

Another condition is that if at any time "a significant change occures in the Government wage policy," either party may request negotiations on wages.

Thus, if the CIO's drive to overturn the Little Steel formula should succeed, UMW President John L. Lewis presumably would be back on the doorstep of the War Labor Board, or whatever the wage stabilization agency happened to be. Finally, of course, the parties may agree mutually at any time to open the contract.

Provides Retroactive Pay

Besides maintaining existing conditions, the agreement also provides a $40 individual retroactive payment for underground traveltime. Inside workers spend 9 hours underground per shift. Fifteen minutes of this is a lunch period without pay. Forty-five minutes travel time is assumed, leaving 8 hours for production.

The operators on the subcommittee which negotiated the accord represented soft coal tonnage in the northern Appalachian area, Indiana, Illinois, and most of the districts west of the Mississippi. The southern Appalachian region and Alabama did not participate.

Export Freight Shows Increase

There were 133,537 cars of export freight, excluding coal and grain, handled through United States ports in November compared with 75,767 cars in November last year, or an increase of 76 per cent, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

Export grain unloaded at the ports totaled 4772, compared with 3259 in November, 1942, or an increase of 46 per cent.

Please do your Christmas Shopping patiently...

THIS YEAR store people are working harder than ever to make your Christmas shopping successful. But they are working under enormous difficulties—with new wartime problems of supply, personnel and delivery, added to the usual rush of holiday buying.

You can do many things to help them—and yourself. Simple and easy things like making a detailed shopping list to save time at the counters . . . buying at less busy hours . . . and carrying purchases home with you. Before you start out each morning, write these words at the top of your shopping list: "BE PATIENT!"

For months, stores have been working out ways to make your Christmas shopping quick and easy. For example, many stores have located their National Cash Registers and wrapping desks in positions convenient to every section. When the customer ahead of you pays for her purchase and the clerk records it on the Cash Register, you know you don't have to wait. National Cash Registers save valuable time on both sides of the counter during the holiday season . . . just as they do all through the year.

Let's put the Christmas spirit into our Christmas shopping this year by remembering to shop early and shop patiently. The National Cash Register Company, Dayton, Ohio—344 Offices in the U. S. and Canada.

Wherever records are kept or money is handled, there is need for some product of The National Cash Register Co.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Griffith Stadium, Dec. 12.—There are 35,540 fans in the park as the Redskins and Giants take the field, and we were just about to refer to the game as a sell-out. For some reason, however, we don't like the sound of that word lately, so we re-state it by saying simply that the park is sold out.

POVICH

Elmer Layden, commissioner of the National Football League, is watching the game from an upper box seat. He came all the way from Chicago for the primary purpose of flipping a coin to decide the scene of a play-off game, if necessary. The Office of Defense Transportation granted him no special travel priority, we assume.

The Giants have just made it two in a row by winning the toss before the opening kick-off. An hour earlier they won the toss in the Stadium office and chose the Polo Grounds as the scene of a play-off game if one is required. The Giants not only win the flip but they get downright flip themselves by choosing to kickoff to the Redskins.

Sammy Baugh isn't in the starting line-up, but neither are Ben Paschal and Tuffy Leemans of the Giants. George Cafego is running the Redskins and right now he is setting a pretty good example for the boys by carrying the opening kickoff to the 35-yard line before getting hit by a long ton of Giants.

The Giants have the ball now and are going no where with it, so Len Younce is back in kicking formation. There isn't going to be any deception on the play, because Younce is a 205-pound guard who is being pulled back as a punter, and if he runs or passes the ball, Coach Steve Owen will go out there and drag him from the lineup, personally.

The Redskins have just been Paschal-shocked. He came into the game and tore off 8 yards on his first play, and the 35,540 in the stands are now beginning to understand what happened to the Redskins last week at the Polo Grounds.

The game is 11 minutes old by the clock and nobody can prove, yet, that there is a Sammy Baugh. He hasn't been in the line-up.

There is a Sammy Baugh all right, and he hasn't changed much. He just went in there and on the first play he quick-kicked 73 yards to the Giants' 18-yard line. For the first time during the quarter the Redskin fans are beginning to feel a bit happy. Hold that, though, Paschal just ran left end for 15 yards.

It's the second quarter and now the Giants are very much confused. Three Giants covered Andy Farkas on a pass play and nobody covered Frank Seno who crossed over from the opposite direction, and took a pass from Baugh for a 27-yard gain to the Giants' 20.

There it is, Baugh to Aguirre for a touchdown. The Giants had Aguirre outnumbered two to one at the spot where the pass was caught, but he gave Cuff and Brown the slip and the Redskins 6 points. Baugh committed a balk on the throw to Aguirre, but all's fair in football.

Hank Soar just helped Baugh to complete another pass. He intercepted one aimed at Bob Masterson and ran it back 22 yards to midfield. It doesn't take Baugh long to catch on, though. On the next play he intercepted a Giant pass aimed at Cuff.

The Redskins don't have a 7-0 lead any more. A lot of things have just happened. Baugh was back to quick-kick from his own 10, but his blocker, Ray Hare, couldn't cope with Frank Cope. Hare was shoved into the path of the kick by Cope and the ball bounced off his helmet into the end zone where Pritko fell on it for a Giant touchdown. And it's going to be 7-7 just as soon as Ward Cuff kicks the extra point. If he misses, that'll be news, brother.

Frank Liebel, the Giants' left end, just hurt his hand, but in what the Giants consider a wonderful cause. Liebel's hand partly blocked another of Baugh's punts and the Giants get the ball in the neighborhood of midfield, which isn't a bad neighborhood to be in possession of the ball.

There's only one thing the Giants can do now, with the down being third and 10 to go, and that's pass. And that's exactly what Emery Nix is doing, and there are two men covering Liebel far down the middle, and it doesn't make any difference because Liebel catches the ball anyway and outruns Baugh and Seno for a 56-yard touchdown play, and it will be 14-7, Giants, as soon as Cuff kicks the point again.

It's half time, and Barnee's Band has just done the best that could be done with that new Redskin song, and if the weather and the Redskins' performance doesn't leave you cold, that new song will.

It's fourth down for the Giants on the Redskins' 42 and they need 6 inches of turf and they get 11 yards with Paschal running around right end, to the great befuddlement of the middle of the Redskins' line. Ordinarily, you do not go around end when you're trying to gain 6 inches, but Paschal was interested in more than that.

And now look, it's Cuff coming in from the flank and cutting through the middle for 20 yards and a touchdown and the Redskins not laying a hand on him. That wasn't a hole in the Redskin line, it was a garage-door opening. And it will be 21-7, as soon as Cuff kicks another point.

Baugh has the ball for the Redskins now and he's going to pass. No, he's going to run. No, he fumbles. It all ends up in an 11-yard loss with Shugart recovering for the Redskins.

Right now, we don't know where the ball is. And neither do the Redskins apparently. Nix had it to start with, on a pass from center, but he might have given it to either Cuff, Shafer, or Paschal. We'll let you know in a minute.

Paschal had it, but that was 16 yards ago. He grabbed the ball from Nix just like he was faking, and hung back there all alone before starting out on a naked reverse that carried all the way to the Redskins' 15.

The Giants are going to settle for a field goal from the 18-yard line with Cuff kicking from an angle, and just as soon as he swings his foot the score is going to be 24-7.

It's the fourth quarter, and Rookie Dave Brown of the Giants insists on completing Baugh's passes. He just made his second interception within five minutes and the Baugh-to-Brown pass isn't very popular with the mob.

You an't trust an old teammate. Sammy Baugh just found that out. He was having a bit of a reunion with Will Wall, the old TCU end, down on the Redskins' 5-yard line with Ray Hare also in the party when Wall suddenly reaches up and grabs a 33-yard pass from Emery Nix for another Giant touchdown.

Out of it all, the Redskins get a trip to New York, but it isn't something they won, or even wanted.

Giants Beat Redskins, 31-7; Playoff in N. Y.

Locals Bow After Taking Lead of 7-0

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The New York Giants climaxed the most amazing comeback in National Football League history yesterday by drubbing the weary, battered and forlorn Redskins, 31 to 7, in Griffith Stadium and forcing a play-off game next Sunday in the Polo Grounds for the Eastern Division championship. The winner will meet the Bears in Chicago December 26 for the title.

The 35,540 fans, comprising the usual sellout crowd, watched in humble silence through the last 40 minutes as the Giants pulled out of a 7-0 deficit and rolled up 31 points with almost ridiculous ease. As the game dragged the Redskin resistance became more feeble.

Three weeks ago the Giants were faced with the seemingly impossible task of winning three straight games, two over the Redskins, while the 'Skins were losing three in a row to even create a tie for the Eastern title. Their chances were ridiculed, the odds were name-your-own. But suddenly the Giant rookies produced, the old-timers spruced up and at the same time the Redskin squad was hit by countless injuries and ailments.

Baugh's Kick Blocked

As an indication of how the fortunes have turned against the Redskins the Giants tied the score yesterday in the second period without touching the ball before it hit the end zone. Sammy Baugh attempted a qick-kick from his own 22-yard line when big Frank Cope broke through, shoved Redskin Ray Hare backward and Baugh's kick bounded off Hare's helmet back into the end zone where Steve Pritko downed the lively pigskin for a touchdown.

Ward Cuff, whose personal scoring almost doubled the Redskins' total, added the point to tie the score and the Giants controlled the play the rest of the way, scoring twice on long passes with Emery Nix on the passing end, once when Cuff broke through untouched for a 20-yard gallop and again on Cuff's 18-yard field goal.

Giant Strategy Puzzling

As expected Giant strategy called for an occasional switch from the effective ground game that puzzled the Redskins last week to the medium of the forward pass Nix, the rookie who followed Baugh and Davey O'Brien at Texas Christian University covered 89 yards on two touchdown passes. He paced Frank Liebel for a 56-yard payoff pitch in the second period and measured Will Walls for a 33-yard scoring aerial in the last quarter. The Giants gained 99 yards passing; 89 of them produced two scores.

The Giants' brilliant rookie ball carrier, Blond Bill Paschal, once again smashed through the Redskins to put his name on the list for outstanding individual accomplishments for the year. The 4 yards he earned through the center of the line late in the game made it 92 yards gained rushing for the game and tops in the league for the season with 572 yards to 571 for Eagle Jack Hinkle.

Paschal, a tired young man in the fourth period after hitting the line 24 times as a ball carrier, was the work horse, and Cuff the sensationalist of the Giants' ground game, as between them they made all but 19 of the Giants' yards gained rushing of the day. Paschal made most of his yardage taking the ball on the direct pass from center, running without interference, while Cuff was the man-in-motion, taking the ball on fakes.

Redskins Score First

The tired and taped Redskins held their own through a scoreless first period and scored first when Baugh, faking beautifully behind the cozy protection of the Redskin line, drew the Giants out of position and smacked Joe Aguirre with a 28-yard touchdown pass directly in front of the goal posts.

But the pace was too much for Coach Dutch Bergman's battered crew. As time passed the Giants must have realized the stories of the Redskins' gross injuries were not exaggerated as the 'Skins lost their drive, meekly gave ground and Bergman's numerous and frantic substitutions were of no avail.

For a badly beaten team the Redskins rolled up a fancy figure of 256 yards gained passing, all but 3 yards to Baugh's account as Sammy hit receivers 16 times in 28 attempts. But all of Baugh's hits could not make up for the five New York interceptions as the Giants threw up their usual effective screen against touchdown heaves.

Pvt. Frank Soar, always a Baugh nemesis on pass defense, intercepted two passes, Dave Brown two and Cuff one. Soar, who uses weekend leaves from an Army camp near New York City to play on defense for Coach Steve Owen, batted down several others.

Seymour Runs 40 Yards

Baugh covered 91 yards on all-out aerials to Ted Lapka and Frank Akins to the Giants' 5-yard line in the closing minutes but with first down the Redskins lost the ball after four Baugh tries from the same spot. Three passes, one in Lapka's hands, missed and the fourth time Baugh tried to run with the ball with receivers covered but was stopped, suddenly like, for no gain. Sam's most productive series was in the second period when Seno and Aguirre took 27 and 28-yard passes to move to the lone touchdown.

One 40-yard breakaway run by Bob Seymour late in the game covered two-thirds of the Redskins' yards gained rushing for the day. On the ground, in blocking, pass receiving and particularly on pass

Griff's Lucky '24 Series Coin Fails, Giants Win Toss, Too

Clark Griffith hauled out the worn silver dollar which brought his Nationals luck in the 1924 World Series against the New York baseball Giants yesterday and it cost him a cool $10,000.

Elmer Layden, pro football commissioner, Jack Mara, president of the New York Giants and George P. Marshall of the Redskins, gathered with a dozen newspapermen and photographers in Griffith's office at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the flip of a coin to decide whether the playoff game, if necessary, would be played in Washington or New York.

Griffith offered the silver dollar which was used to determine whether the deciding game of the '24 series would be played in Washington or New York. Nineteen years ago the coin said "Washington," and the Nats won the championship.

As president of the visiting team, Mara had the choice and as Layden tossed the heavy piece against the ceiling Mara yelled "Tails." The coin hit the floor and rolled under a nearby desk and Layden said, "I think it's tails."

Marshall got down on his hands and knees and carefully dragged the coin from under the desk and tails it was.

Tickets were printed last week, on order from Layden, for both Griffith Stadium and the Polo Grounds and thus the Giants will put the Polo Grounds' 56,000 seats on sale tomorrow morning. The play-off is the first to be held in the Eastern Division. The Bears and Packers required a play-off to determine the Western champion three years ago.

Griffith lost the park rental of 15 per cent of the net gate, or more than $9000, plus concessions on the toss.

Reckord Scores In Boat Races

Jack Reckord of Baltimore piloted his Sidecar to victory in the first race of the Potomac River Sailing Association's Frostbite Series yesterday at the Capital Yacht Club. Second in the penguin class race went to Walter Dawson in Butch and third to Leon Penzo in Mergaes.

Mrs. Charles Runyon accepted the National Association's trophy given to the winner of the first series on behalf of her husband, who is in the Navy. Runyon was high-point scorer in the penguin class races.

'Skins Blame Poor Showing To Overdose of Football

By Al Costello

The Redskins sum it up in three little words:

"Too much football."

Since July 20, when the team reported to San Diego for drills, the team has done nothing but practice, play, eat and sleep football. One week less than six full months is too tough for any team to take and keep on winning, they declare almost in unanimity.

They are tired mentally and battered physically, yet as soon as the final gun ended yesterday's rout, the dressing room topic was not so much of how and why the Giants won but on next Sunday's game in New York, which will decide the Eastern Division title and send the winner into action against the Bears, December 26, in Chicago, for the championship.

The Redskins were downhearted and, in some cases, disgusted with their showing. But their attitude was surprisingly "up" when it should have been, by all means, definitely "down." Joe Aguirre and Bob Seymour said almost in the same breath "We have one shot left" and the entire club seemed to clutch that remark as a mental lifebelt for their bluish tinge.

Coach "Dutch" Bergman and everybody on the squad believed

Berger, Robinson Clash Tonight at Uline's

Billy Speary Faces Banks In Semifinal

One of the spoilers of the welterweight division will attempt to upset one of its best boxers at Uline Arena tonight when Ernest "Cat" Robinson, club fighting Negro from Jamaica, Long Island, meets polished and clever Maxie Berger, Jewish-Canadian champion over a scheduled 10-round distance.

In another 10-round number Billy Speary, high ranking, young lightweight from Nanticoke, Pa., bows in locally against Billy Banks, local Negro favorite.

Berger 2 to 1 Favorite

Berger, who has been boxing professionally since 1935 and who has one of the best records in the boxing game, will answer tonight's opening bell a 2 to 1 favorite over Robinson, but admits a healthy respect for the "Cat's" punching power.

Recently honorably discharged from the Canadian army, Berger is conceded a fine chance of regaining a top spot among the world's welterweights during the winter months. Backing the popular Jewish warrior in his comeback to the heights is Ray Arcel, nationally known trainer, who will direct Maxie into action tomorrow night.

Robinson put Frankie Wills down for two counts here recently, and previously knocked out Vinnie Vines and upset Joe Agosta in New York. He is a strong fighter and willing mixer, and plans setting a hot pace from the opening bell tonight.

Speary Favored Over Banks

Speary, a crowd pleasing youngster with an excellent record, holds decisions over Harry Jeffra, Joey Archibald and Pedro Hermandez to mention a few. He will rule an 8 to 5 favorite over Banks, but faces in the local boy a good boxer and sharp puncher capable of putting over an upset.

In a six round supporting number Bee Bee Washington is paired with Charley Gaines, while Skinny Wilson engages Jimmy Jericho lightweights, and Leroy Fleming boxes Jimmy Allen, middleweight, in fours.

Green Hornets Win

Green Hornets yesterday defeated Congress Heights A. C. 20-6 at Fairlawn Field. Harry Adams scored all three touchdowns for the Hornets.

Giants' Blond Blizzard Off for Early 12-Yard Gain

Bill Paschal (No. 8), New York Giants' fleet back, cradles the ball in his arm as he scoots around left end for a 12-yard gain in first quarter against the Redskins yesterday. Joe Aguirre (No. 19) and Ken Hayden (No. 18), Redskins end and center, respectively, are coming in to break up the run 41-39 in overtime at Buffalo, meeting City College of New York. Brigham Young, victors over Canisius 45-36 in a fine exhibition of one-handed shooting, opposes Long Island in the other half.

Philadelphia has Penn-Cornell and Temple-Oklahoma Aggies, Chicago shows Northwestern-Notre Dame and Indiana-Depaul, and New York presents NYU-St. Francis and St. John's-Detroit in Saturday night bargain features. Other standout games coming up are Ohio State and Kentucky tomorrow, Purdue-De Pauw V-5 Wednesday, and Purdue-Great Lakes, Dartmouth-Holy Cross, Marquette-Wisconsin, Western Michigan-Michigan and Norfolk Navy-Virginia on Saturday.

Tony Hinkle's Sailors from Great Lakes handed the Whiz Kids Juniors, from Illinois their first beating, 52-44, in a Chicago feature Saturday while Fuzzy Levane and his Ellis Island Coast Guardsmen, early winners over Princeton, were racking up an impressive 70-51 decision over C. C. N. Y.

Western Michigan knocked off Notre Dame a week ago and continued in an upset mood by spoiling Northwestern's opening 47-45. Other Big Ten favorites had trouble but won. Michigan made it three in a row, 46-44, over Fort Custer, a team badly battered by Western Michigan 73-34, Tuesday. Purdue had to go all out in two extra periods to down De Pauw V-5s, 46-41. Ohio State stopped Denison, 60-49; Iowa bowed in Friday by drubbing Nebraska, 50-33; and Indiana suffered its second defeat last night, bowing to a strong Kentucky team, 66-41.

Dartmouth made it two in a row in the Eastern loop by disposing of previously unbeaten Cornell, 52-38, with Aud Brindley and Larry Killick showing the way. Princeton came from behind to shade Columbia, 33-31, in the other league tilt on a hoop and foul by Mike Shinwarik. Penn won as it pleased from Yale, 58-31.

Among the Midwestern independents, Notre Dame made it two out of three by trimming Wisconsin, 41-31, DePaul snatched its fifth straight by slaughtering Nebraska, 55-15.

In the East, Muhlenberg snapped back from a midweek loss to Princeton by running Temple's opener, 34-32. Rhode Island State rolled up 125 points in midweek before quitting until after the holidays.

Duke got back on the win path in the South by downing Hampden Sydney, 50-25, and on Tuesday meets Columbia (S. C.) Air Base. North Carolina, regarded as the Blue Devil's leading conference contender, trimmed Columbia 47-35, but was upset by little Milligan 42-35.

On the Pacific Coast U. S. L. A. tripped California Tech, 58-41 and Occidental 52-34; Washington State downed Whitman twice by two-point margins, Oregon State stopped Williamette 28-23 and California and Southern California squeezed out victories over Livermore Navy and Roosevelt Navy, respectively.

Southwestern winners were Southern Methodist 4137 over Oklahoma, Texas over Randolph Field, 45-37, and Arkansas over Conway Independents, 60-33.

Davis Sweepstakes To Jessie Sacrey

Piecing together a mediocre afternoon set of 531 with a fancy night set of 637, Jessie Sacrey, captain of Lafayette Women's District League team, last night captured the Seventeenth Annual Women's Meyer Davis Sweepstakes at Lucky Strike by a comfortable 40-pin margin with a 10-game total of 1168. The victory was worth $40.

In second place was Lorraine Gulli, Hi-Skor captain, who put together sets of 534-585 for a 1119 total. She collected $20. Third place and $12 went to Bing Moen, also of Hi-Skor, with 594-1109 and fourth prize of $8 was taken by Alma Mehler, of Anacostia Spillway, with 532-571—1103.

Redskins Lose, 31 to 7, After Gaining Lead

defense the Redskins sorely missed Wilbur Moore, who sat huddled in blankets on the sidelines.

Baugh entered the game halfway through the first period and on his very first play quick-kicked 73 yards to the Giants' 18-yard line, watched his second quick-kick attempt boomerang over his head for a Giant touchdown. That was when Cope broke through tackle, spun Hare completely around and backward where his helmet was in the way of the kick. Cope received credit for personally blocking the kick by most of those present.

The ball bounced high toward the sidelines with Giants first in pursuit and Pritko reached it in the end zone.

The Redskins failed to gain after the kickoff and Baugh punted to the Giants' 44-yard line. On the first play, Nix tried his second pass of the day and, considering he got it away a split second before being smothered by Redskin lineman, it was a thing of beauty. Liebel was down fast, took the ball on a dead run in midfield about the 20 and cut for the right-hand corner zone toward the leftfield bleachers. Seno gave a wild leap 8 yards from the goal line and missed. Cuff converted.

Giants Score Quickly

The Redskins handled the ball just twice in the third period and gained a net 3 yards. The Giants handled the ball twice and scored a touchdown and Cuff kicked his field goal, his third of the season which tied Don Hutson for the lead.

The Giants simply went 50 yards on the ground for their third touchdown, sending Paschal and Cuff, Cuff then Paschal through the Redskins. They spurned a kick with fourth down, inches to go, on the Redskins' 41 and Paschal went wide for 11 yards when the 'Skins were set to stop him for the necessary yard through center. From the 20-yard line Cuff trotted towards center as the man-in-motion, took the ball quickly from Nix and with the help of two vital blocks by Len Younce and Cope, went 20 yards for a score. He took Baugh out with a stiff arm about the 10-yard line when Baugh stood between Cuff and six points.

Paschal Sets Up Score

Another 16-yard end run to the 16 by Paschal without the help of a single blocker set up the field goal as the Georgia boy used sheer speed to get away. Back to pass on third down after the Redskins held twice, Nix made six yards when he found all receivers covered and nobody in front of him. Cuff stepped back to the 18-yard line on fourth down and added the field goal for insurance.

Cuff was so sure of himself he kept his head down as he kicked and didn't bother to watch the flight of the ball, but merely trotted back as the Giant bench's burst of enthusiasm assured him it was good.

The Giants' fourth-period touchdown was set in motion when Brown intercepted a Baugh pass meant for Aguirre and returned 15 yards to the Giant 31. A 5-yard penalty set them back to the 36 and the leg-weary Paschal made 3 yards in two tries. From the 33 Nix called his own signal, again barely got the ball away, this time to Will Walls, who made connection on the 5 and dragged Baugh and Hare over the goal line with him. To make it official we'll add Cuff place-kicked the point, but everybody knows Cuff never misses a point after touchdown.

Giant Coach Owen must have had lots of nice things to say to his linemen. Al Blozis played another terrific ball game. Len Younce carried out his guard duties nicely and averaged better than 45 yards in pulling out of the Giant line to handle five of the six punts. Cope's individual feat of shoving Hare into Baugh's quick kick overshadowed his consistent work at tackle. Mel Hein, Vic Carroll and Charley Avedisian lent able support in blocking the Redskin ball carriers and blocking linemen out of the way for Paschal and Cuff.

Owen had a system in case the line wouldn't hold. He cost the Giants 25 yards for five too-many-time out penalties in insisting on substituting Soar and Brown on defense, but the penalties paid dividends as the pair made numerous tackles in the secondary in addition to their invaluable work on pass defense.

Bears Easily Top Paterson Five, 30 to 14

The Lichtman Bears, fresh from a victorious western trip, easily defeated the Paterson (N. J.) American Leaguers yesterday at Turner's Arena before 800 fans, 30-14.

The Bears drew away to an early lead in the first period, "Pop" Gates accounting for four baskets, and with the assistance of Zack Clayton and Dolly King, running the count at the half to 19-8.

Jackie Bethards and "Bricktop" Wright went in for the second half, and toyed with the opposition, scoring at will. Will Woods, for the visitors, with a scant 6 points, was high scorer man.

In the preliminary, the Junior Bears defeated Fort Myer, 20-7.

'Skins Blame Defeat on 'Long Season'

Frank Cope's block of Sammy Baugh's attempted quick-kick was the turning point. That touchdown, which tied the score at 7-7, was like a shot in the arm to the Giants at a time when they were beginning to sag after the Redskins had scored only a few minutes before. It gave the Giants new life and started the fire which consumed the Redskins. "One break like that is all a good team needs," Bergman said sadly, "and the Giants are a good team, too."

Owen Says Boys Are Good

Stout Steve Owen, who has done one of the year's masterpieces in putting together his Giant club, admitted that blocked kick turned the tide. "But," he said, "even if it was a break, a good club makes its own breaks, and that's the kind of a team we have."

Needless to say, Stout Steve and all the Giants were pretty happy gents, especially Vic Carroll, former Redskin now a Giant lineman, and who gave a good account of himself.

"Funny," said Vic, "Marshall didn't think I was good enough for his club, and maybe I'm not, but I'm good enough to play on a club that can beat his team twice in a row. And after next Sunday it'll be three in a row."

Two of the loudest Redskins in praise of the potent Giant running attack were Sammy Baugh and Wee Willie Wilkin. Baugh said the present Giants have the best running attack he's ever seen. So did Willie. In comparing the mental and physical conditions of the two clubs, Wilkin said the Giants are at present "up" as the Redskins were when they went into the Green Bay game.

Just Wait, Says Masterson

Capt. Bob Masterson was philosophical about the whole thing. "We'll do better next week," he said. Baugh, too, believes the club will be in a better frame of mind. "We may give it to them as good as they gave it to us today; you can't tell about this game," he said.

Bergman praised his line, saying it played better than it did last week in New York when the Giants won, 14-10. "But old man injury had more to do with whipping us than the Giants. We'll be in better shape next Sunday. Maybe we'll even have Wilbur Moore. Right now it's fifty-fifty that Moore will, but he may be ready. I hope so."

But with it all, the Redskins still insist it has been "too much football." Sounds more than reasonable.

Play-Off Set for New York

New York-Washington series, and have won nine of the last 12 games. Sammy Baugh boosted his touchdown pass average against the Giants. He has thrown 79 touchdown passes in seven years, five of them against New York—in 14 games.

Wilbur Moore begged out of Doctors' Hospital to attend the game but he returned last night for another blood transfusion. Moore was pale and peaked from loss of blood. It is extremely doubtful that he will play any more this year. Moore chatted before the game in the dressing room with Pvt. Jack Jenkins, U. S. Marines, and Ensign Cecil Hare, U. S. Navy, two boys the Redskins could have put to good use yesterday.

Scalpers were stuck with tickets a good half hour before game time and couldn't even give them away. The usual number of servicemen were on hand, hoping somebody would have an extra ticket, and they were all taken care of but the supply exceeded the demand.

Baugh protected his passing average with 16 completions in 28 attempts and topped Sid Luckman for the year in efficiency. Baugh completed 133 passes in 239 attempts for 1754 yards for the season and 23 touchdowns. He trailed Luckman in yardage and touchdown passes. Sammy had 19 passes intercepted. For the seventh straight year Baugh completed more than half his passes. WHITTLESEY.

The Penalty of Popularity

You go to your dealer and ask for a case of National Bohemian or National Premium Beer. And he says he is all sold out--had none since Monday... Or you order a lunch or dinner at a restaurant and say: "--and a bottle of National"...and the waiter says: --"Haven't had a bottle since day before yesterday—but I can give you so-and-so" ...and then you say: "I can't see why I can't get National Beer!"... THAT'S THE PENALTY OF POPULARITY.

Like the father who says to his son: "Johnny, this hurts me more than it hurts you--" so we say to you: "It hurts US more than it hurts you when that bottle of NATIONAL doesn't step right up to please you."

Year in and year out we have brewed with utmost care a beer to satisfy you and please you. Year after year we have been rewarded seeing more and more folks turn to NATIONAL. Right now more people are calling for NATIONAL than ever before--and right now wartime conditions make it impossible for us to supply all the orders.

Actually, the amount of National Beer we are able to turn out is only a little below last year. Every day thousands upon thousands of cases of National Bohemian and National Premium go out into quick consumption. The shortage of NATIONAL results only in part from the rationing of our supply of malt. Mainly it is due to such an increase in demand--IT'S THE PENALTY OF POPULARITY.

BREWING INDUSTRY FOUNDATION MEMBER

All we can say is it hurts us more than it hurts you when we can't supply the demand. There's a real solution though--let's put on more steam and get this war won--then just step up and say "National"--and we'll all drink a huge National toast to VICTORY...

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

HERE ARE TWO TYPES of Congressional investigations, conducted by two members of Congress from widely separated sections of the country and with exactly opposite effects on the taxpayers.

One, conducted by Representative D'Alesandro, Democrat, of Maryland, cost the taxpayers nothing. The other, conducted by Senator McCarran of Nevada, another Democrat, cost the taxpayers $25,000, to say nothing of the time of many Government employes. But it was a big help to McCarran's political future.

The D'Alesandro investigation was into living and health conditions in the Nation's crowded, wartime Capital. Although a Senate committee got $25,000 for a similar investigation, the Baltimore Congressman never asked for a penny, paid for incidental expenses out of his own pocket and insisted that his colleagues do likewise. He engaged no array of legal or clerical talent, but used the regular staff of the House District of Columbia Committee.

Afterwards, U. S. Surgeon General Parran said of D'Alesandro's report: "It is the most comprehensive, vigorous, interesting report I have ever seen from a Congressional committee on health conditions in the District of Columbia."

McCarran Goes Home

IN CONTRAST, Senator McCarran's probe group was a catch-all which wandered all over his home State and nearby areas, holding desultory hearings on placer mining claims, Government land acquisition, a bombing range in southeast Colorado, forest grazing permits taken over by the War Department, land released by railroads under Transportation Act, crowding of ranges, conservation of wildlife, and the future of fishing.

Almost anyone who had an axe to grind came before Senator McCarran, and his long-extended hearings at public expense have been a great aid politically. Among other things, they helped him get back to his own State of Nevada, for almost every hearing was scheduled so that the Senator was not too far from home.

For instance, in June, 1941, he scheduled hearings in Ely and Elko, Nev. In September, October and November of that year, he toured through Wyoming, Utah, Arizona and held two hearings in Reno and Las Vegas, Nev. In the fall of 1942, he held hearings in Tonapah, Nev., and Greenwood Springs, Colo. This year, he has gone back for more hearings in Reno, also in Fallon and Ely, Nevada, together with Salt Lake City, Denver, Phoenix and Albuquerque.

While all this makes for nice visits to the Senator's own political stamping ground, it keeps Government officials busy trotting all over the country, using up valuable time and the taxpayers' money in order to answer all the things McCarran wants answered.

Ford Plant Behind

ONE OF FORD'S war plants is limping badly, and Washington experts are offering crutches.

It's a magnesium plant located at River Rouge, turning out that light metal required in airplanes. It was authorized by RFC's Defense Plant Corporation nearly two years ago (early 1942), with a Government investment of $11,000,000.

But production has been so slow that both defense plant and WPB officials decided something would have to be done. So the Aluminum Division of WPB asked the Ford manager to come to Washington for conferences.

Both WPB and DPC are offering advice and expressing concern. They are saying in effect: "You have had nearly two years in which to reach production goals, and if you don't make the grade soon, the war will be over."

Labor Prepares for 1944

MORE GOVERNMENT officials are gradually leaving to become associated with farm and labor unions.

The CIO Committee for Political Action has now recruited:

C. B. Baldwin, former Farm Security Administrator and short-time State Department official, and Raymond S. McKeough, former Congressman from Illinois, and former OPA regional director for Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Meanwhile, Aubrey Williams, former director of the National Youth Administration, has joined the Farmers' Union.

Preparing for 1944, Sidney Hillman, who runs the CIO Political Committee, is setting up "ABC Committees" throughout the country, stressing unity in the labor field. "A" is for AFL, "B" for Railroad Brotherhoods, and "C" for CIO.

His CIO Committee for Political Action already has a campaign chest of $700,000, put up by the larger unions to use in '44. No favorite son has yet been selected for President and, for the present, the committee will concentrate on Congress.

Dwindling AAA

BUDGET ESTIMATES for the next fiscal year are not yet public, but here is one estimate which will come as a blow to farmers.

The famous "Triple-A," which saved farmers in 1933 and has always been synonymous with the New Deal, is about to be cut drastically. It is the Roosevelt Administration which is making the cut, not Congress.

In fact, Budget Bureau first proposed, in closed-door hearings, to eliminate AAA altogether. This proposal was ruled out, but Budget then made a 50 per cent slash from $400,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Taken together with the near elimination of Farm Security Administration, the AAA cut indicates how far farmers have come back economically.

Merry-Go-Round

REAL AUTHOR of the slogan, "Take the peace out of politics and take the politics out of peace," is Herbert Bayard Swope, editor of the old New York World and now public relations adviser to Secretary Stimson. It has since been picked up by the B2 H2 Senators to express the importance of keeping factional GOP-Democratic politics out of a permanent peace treaty . . . Smiling Jimmie Davis, author of "You Are My Sunshine" and candidate for Governor of Louisiana, suggests that all candidates conduct their campaigns in the form of a bond drive for Uncle Sam. Maybe the man who sells the most bonds should be elected . . . Agricultural experts are intrigued with Alston Waring's book, "Roots in the Earth," a boost for the small farmer.

Facts About Subsidies

By Roger W. Babson

Opposing Views; Both Honest

So many inquiries come to me asking for an explanation of "subsidies" that I am in Washington getting the story. Frankly, there are two sides to the problem and I am convinced that the leaders on both sides are honest. If you believe in "paying-as-you-go" and letting nature take its course, then you will oppose subsidies; but if you believe in borrowing and postponing the day of settlement, then you will favor subsidies. To be specific, the farmers are opposing subsidies; but labor is urging subsidies.

A subsidy bears the same relation to prices as a dam bears to an unruly stream of water. A dam does not destroy the water; but the flow can be regulated by a dam. Dams are, therefore, useful in flood control; but if too much water is dammed up, it either flows over the dam or else breaks the dam. In the long run, you cannot fool or have a substitute for the law of demand and supply. Therefore, subsidies are useful to regulate prices; but only for a short time. Subsidies are no good to prevent price rises which are due to a permanent increased demand or shortage of supply.

If the producers of wheat are not making enough money, they will stop raising wheat. There are two ways to prevent this. One is to let the price of wheat go up so that production will again increase; the other is for the Government to "appease" the farmers by giving them a small bonus or subsidy for raising wheat. (A few years ago we gave them a bonus for not raising wheat!) In a way, the subsidy plan seems fair because then the extra cost would be distributed all over the country through taxation and not fixed upon the farmers alone.

When the law of supply and demand is permitted freely to work—as it must be in the long run—there is a considerable pyramiding of profits. For instance, when the farmer raises his price for wheat, the convertors, wholesalers and retailers are not content to add the equivalent amount to the price of flour and bread, but all increase their prices on a percentage basis. This could result in the price of bread increasing 5 cents when the farmer receives only 1 cent more for the wheat in the bread. Hence, the labor unions want subsidies.

President Roosevelt and his advisors are having a terrible struggle to keep wages at their present level and this can be done only by keeping prices at their present level. The Administration is in an especially tough spot at the present time because next year is election year. It will be very difficult to hold both the farmer vote and the labor vote, to say nothing regarding the consumers' vote. Subsidies do not solve the problem, but they could postpone the solution until after the election!

This country now is much like a man who needs to have a surgical operation but he has some very important affairs facing him and cannot now afford the time to go to the hospital. Therefore, the doctors give him a belt to wear and certain pills to take which will delay the necessity of an immediate operation. Moreover, once in a while, during such a delay, nature cures the patient and the operation is not needed at all. Although believing in their hearts that the subsidy program will give only temporary aid, the President's advisors do know that there is one chance in ten of it giving permanent relief.

Subsidies are habit forming. To start subsidies may be like a man starting to use a drug. A man believes he can quit it any time, but too many have been sadly disappointed. Subsidies are like certain drugs—useful on occasions, maybe, but very dangerous. After subsidizing one product, producers of other products will try to get similar Government aid; soon the country could be in an awful mess. As it is always easier to start a habit than to break it up, it will be much more difficult to cut off subsidies in years to come, than to start them at the present time.

A further evil of subsidies is that they are never paid for by current taxes, but by selling Government bonds and dumping the cost on future generations. Naturally, this is a popular argument; but a very questionable one in the sight of God. Finally, this question of subsidies is closely connected with the possible length of the war. If we are in for a long war there is no use of bothering with subsidies. We had better let nature take its course and inflation gradually increase with a slow rise in both prices and wages. Both must go up together and, hence, in the end no one group will be any better off.

On the other hand, if it is to be a short war, then subsidies can perform a real service even to the farmers by lessening the dangerous drop in farm prices which is sure to take place after the war. This is because subsidies will succeed in keeping down prices for a short time. Probably—as the lesser of two evils—a subsidy on a very few universally used products may now be wise.

GOOD?

You bet it's good!

And it's no cinch these days to make a good glass of beer!

You know the story . . . priorities, rationing, and the greater demand for beer by so many newcomers.

But every glass of Arrow is GOOD BEER. And here's why: We're not going to use short cuts even though they may be recognized as legitimate brewing practice.

We want to keep Arrow a GOOD beer in spite of these abnormal times. We want to keep that distinctly different Arrow flavor that so many like so much. We want you to be able to say "Arrow STILL makes GOOD beer!"

We'll keep it that way as long as we make Arrow.

No wonder

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

UNRRA Office Here To Be Polyglot Outfit

The strangest Government office of them all soon will be set up here in Washington. It'll be UNRRA, the alphebetical name for United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. In the office will be approximately 1000 employes but less than half will be Americans. The remainder will be British, Chinese, Russians, South Americans and representatives from all the other United Nations. Other UNRRA offices will be opened in London, the Far East, and several other places. The agency will have an over-all administrative staff of between 2200 and 2400 employes. Arrangement already have been made to protect the Civil Service status of permanent Government employes who join UNRRA.

UNRRA has been a going concern for about a month, and still it has only one employe and that's something of a record. The employe's name is Herbert Lehman, former Governor of New York. Lehman is using employes on the payrolls of the State Department and the Foreign Economic Administration to round up a staff. In his office will be experts on supply, health, sanitation, food transport and the like. Money for the employes' salaries will be supplied on a proportionate basis from each of the United Nations. Several smaller nations already have put up their parts of the expenses and a bill is now before Congress to authorize our share. One of Governor Lehman's biggest jobs is to find space here for UNRRA. The Governor has vetoed a suggestion that the policymakers be located here and the operations be run from New York or some other nearby city. He wants the entire American office here. It's hoped to get UNRRA space in the Dupont Circle Apartment Building.

The Navy is getting a good supply of WAVES for office work here. Last week 500 were moved into a dormitory at Girl Town, officially known as Arlington Farms. The dorm rooms are compact, bright, and homelike. But not the WAVES' quarters. It seems that some brasshat who insists that everything should be militarized objected to the dorms on the ground that the WAVES had too much privacy. What did he do but send a gang of carpenters into the dorms to knock out part of the connecting walls. Now the rooms are separated by partitions that have an opening of about a foot at top and bottom. It's like living in a goldfish bowl but the brasshats say it's much easier to inspect the quarters.

The President will be urged to make a report to the Nation via radio on his conferences with United Nations leaders . . . The White House has turned down plans that War Relocation Authority be abolished as an independent agency and its duties be transferred either to Immigration and Naturalization in Justice Department or the War Department. Western Congressmen are keeping up the fight, however . . . Top Treasury officials expect Randolph Paul, general counsel, to resign after Congress disposes of the tax bill despite his denials. . . . Col. Edward McCormack won't take over his new job as chief investigator of the Ramspeck Committee until after January 1 . . . Maryland's State director of OPA has been classified 1-A.

Works Projects Administration, National Youth, and Civilian Conservation Corps—all ordered abolished long ago—are still in existence. The Senate the other day approved a six-month extension of NYA to June 30 and this caused Senator McKellar to remark that he had made an inquiry back in the Republican days to find out how many Federal agencies had actually been abolished and he said he had discovered one insignificant bureau. "You cannot abolish them," he sadly commented. CCC has been liquidating for 18 months and it's now down to a $20,000 annual appropriation. WPA still has 117 people and McKellar demanded to know of General Fleming, Federal Works administrator, when he was going to get rid of them. The general explained the number was being reduced every month and that two employes were dismissed. "Two," shouted McKellar, "at that rate it'll take 50 years to get rid of WPA." WPA also is lated to be closed out completely by next June. Public Works is another agency that is generally presumed to be abolished. It has seven employes.

Senator Mead of New York is rewriting his bill, which would pay a 15 per cent night wage differential to all employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. His new bill will be in line with suggestions made by the Budget Bureau . . . The War Department medical unit has out a timely booklet on how to prevent and treat colds. Many Federal offices were reported back to normal on Saturday, but still an unusually large number of people were out with the cold bug . . . At the War Production Board are long distance phone checkers. They aren't wiretappers in the strict sense of the word, but they do listen in on conversations, and if you're caught making a personal call at Government expense you'll be invited to pay the bill and frequently the offenders are given another invitation—to leave the WPB . . . Don't forget Government Girl war stamp dance tonight at the Shoreham.

Boys and Girls Work Gratis For Their Bond Drive Buyers

SHE BOUGHT BOND—Mrs. Louis D. Robbins of 720 Tuckerman st. nw. bought a war bond and watches Gayle Handlemaa, 14, of 1341 Jonquil st. nw. (left) and Harryette Summers, 16, of 3618 Connecticut ave. nw., affect a more personal exchange as Baby Robbins looks at big sister as though to say "they didn't do this for YOU"

With the slogan, "You Buy War Bonds From Us and We'll Work Gratis for You," a group of sororities, fraternities and congregations in Washington have banded together to make more war equipment available to the armed forces and to forgo the giving of Christmas presents this year.

They will hold a dance at the Shoreham Hotel December 22 to celebrate the results of their drive. Sergt. William Roff and his band from the Signal Corps will furnish the music, according to Corpl. Gusti Vuzzo, the band's manager.

House-to-house calls are made with appeals to buy bonds from the young men and women who offer to do housework, attend furnaces and do other chores.

Among the groups and their leaders are Upsilon Lambda, Bernard Ehrich; Brondese Club, John Kaneron; Potomac AZA, Peter Silbert; Simon Atlas, Marvin Garfinkle; Capital City, Henry Winer; Alpha Lambda Phi, Harrette Summers and Esther Snyder; Kappa Sigma Tau, Lucille Kirch; Sigma Phi, Irving Fleishman; Mu Sigma, Stanley Jackobson; Sarar Club, Dorris Oisboid; Dodeen Club; Rebecca Hurwitz; Chi Delta Chi, Phyllis Solomise; Washington Hebrew Association, Virginia Block.

Isaac Block, executive secretary of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, announced last night that the congregation has sold $5000 so far as its part in the drive.

Site Selected

Adas Israel To Build New Synagogue

The congregation of Adas Israel Synagogue, 6th and I sts. nw., has purchased a site for a new building to be erected after the war at the southeast corner of Connecticut ave. and Ellicott st. nw., it was learned last night.

More than $100,000 already has been pledged toward the new building fund, it is said. The new site is approximately 34,000 square feet.

Joseph H. Wilner is president of the congregation; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, spiritual leader; Abe S. Kay, chairman of the building committee, and Fred S. Kogod, chairman of the finance committee.

One of the city's oldest Jewish Congregations, Adas Israel was organized in 1869, and the cornerstone of its first building at 6th and G sts. nw., was laid in 1876 in the presence of President Ulysses S. Grant and other dignitaries.

The present edifice was erected in 1907. Rabbi Metz has been connected with the congregation since 1931, and Cantor Louis Novick since 1923. The congregation now numbers more than 600 members. The Sisterhood has morethan 500 members.

City News In Brief

Police last night were attempting to learn the identity of a man, about 60, found dead against a picket fence Saturday night at 1104 Eighth st. nw. After an autopsy yesterday, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, assistant coroner, said the man died from a heart attack.

The initials E. A. M. were found on the man's clothing. He was five feet 10 inches tall, wore a dark blue pin-striped suit, dark overcoat, blue striped shirt, red dotted tie, black shoes and a dark gray hat.

J. Austin Latimer, new president of the Washington College of Law Alumni Association, will preside for the first time at a special meeting of the association to be held today at the college.

Chorus to Sing

Judas Maccabaeus, Handle's "Song of Victory" will be presented by the Washington Choral Society tomorrow night at Constitution Hall. Louis A. Potter is conductor. Soloists will be Marie Wilkins, Victor Laderoute, Mary Van Kirk and Corpl. Glenn Darwin.

Problems of Youth

Wartime and postwar problems of youth will be discussed by representatives of 13 citizens associations at a meeting to be held in Woodrow Wilson High School today at 8 p. m. Capt. Rhoda Milliken and M. A. Jones, assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, will speak.

Jury Report On Gallinger Due Today

The District Grand Jury today is scheduled to make a return to the District Court on its investigation of Gallinger Hospital, it was announced last night. The decision came a few hours after the Senate District Committee announced it would meet this morning in executive session to consider recommendations for a subcommittee for the removal of five District and hospital officials.

While the grand jury will report its findings of an investigation into alleged "irregularities," the full District Committee is scheduled to decide what action, if any, is to be taken with regard to the local officials.

The grand jury action may result in indictments or may find all or some allegations unwarranted. The Senate District Committee will have to pass on the report by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, chairman of the Gallinger investigating committee, which asks for dismissal of Commissioner Guy Mason, Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Gallinger Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock and two physicians, Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist, and Dr. Charles Cake, head of the TB ward.

Support of 'Share-Your-Home' Project Urged by Clergymen

Youngsters of the Primary Department of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, yesterday made decorations which the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society will have placed on Christmas trees at Gallinger Hospital

By Robert Tate Allan

Washington churchgoers yesterday got a carol-accented preview of Christmas, as many events of a Yule nature were sponsored by congregations.

Pastors of Protestant and Catholic Churches urged worshipers to support the "Share Your Home at Christmas" project by inviting war workers and women in uniform into their homes Christmas Day.

Coinciding with the pre-Christmas observance was the celebration of Universal Bible Sunday, as urged by the American Bible Society, of New York City, and the Washington City Bible Society.

Chorus Sings Carols

Handel's Christmas oratorio, "The Messiah," and other traditional Christmas selections were rendered in a number of churches. The American University chorus, directed by James L. McLain, presented a program "Christmas Carols of Many Lands" last night at Foundry Methodist Church. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Foundry's pastor and Senate chaplain, spoke on "The Carol of Christmas."

In the spirit of a world at war, the congregation of Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., sponsored a family memorial service, at which Christmas cards were addressed to the church's men and women in the armed forces.

More than 100 singers from four choirs of Petworth Methodist Church presented their annual Christmas carol service there last night.

Doing their bit to spread Christmas cheer among the shut-ins, youngsters of the primary department of the Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, yesterday made Christmas tree decorations to be placed on Christmas trees at Gallinger Hospital.

USO Praises Project

Meanwhile, USO officials yesterday praised the "Share Your Home at Christmas" project, which is being sponsored for the second consecutive year by the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission, with the cooperation of The Washington Post and Government and service agencies.

"USO phones are ringing these days with calls from hospitable Washingtonians," officials reported, "offering Christmas dinners in their homes for many of the thousands of men and women in uniform who want just that, more than anything Santa might offer them."

First Yule Away From Home

According to Mrs. Marjorie Scragg, director of the USO for women in uniform at 1911 H st. nw., large numbers of these young women will be spending their first Christmas away from home and a good many of them will probably respond to these offers for home dinners on Christmas. Many will be British and Canadian servicewomen.

Men and women guests of the "share" project will be introduced to their Christmas Day hosts and hostesses at "break-the-ice" teas at USO centers and other places this Sunday at 4 p. m. At most of the 16 local USO clubs and lounges a Christmas feast will be served, buffet style, 6 to 7:30 p. m., December 25.

Baptism Viewed by 4 Generations

AT CHRISTENING—Left to right (by couples)—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilbert, I, great-grandparents; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Gilbert, grandparents; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilbert, II, parents of 6-week-old Cecelia Gilbert; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Reidy, grandparents, and Mrs. Henry W. Bell, a great-grandmother (she is the mother of Mrs. W. C. Gilbert)

Six-week-old Gale Cecilia Gilbert was christened yesterday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church midst a family gathering that included four generations on her father's side and tree generations on her mother's branch.

Gurgling from her soft pink blanket and smiling often at her numerous relatives, little Gale Cecilia was the center of a doting celebration for both sides of the family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael P. Reidy, the maternal grandparents, at 3404 15th st. ne.

Family Tree Fashion

The relationship of all the relatives was a bit complicated to friends and the family thought it best to trace the baby's lineage in family tree fashion.

Starting with the paternal branch: The blue-eyed infant is the daughter of William H. Gilbert, 24, of 4428 First st. ne., an employe of the Navy Department; the granddaughter of William C. Gilbert, 55, 4210 Seventh st. nw., and the great-granddaughter of William H. Gilbert, 80, of 3809 Seventh st. nw.

Also on the paternal side of the family are two great-grandmothers—Mrs. Henry Bell, 76, the father's maternal grandmother who came from Harrisonburg, Va., for the christening, and Mrs. William H. Gilbert, 80, wife of the great-grandfather.

On Maternal Side

The maternal branch consists of Mrs. Margaret Cecilia Reidy Gilbert, 21, mother of the baby, and Mrs. Michael P. Reidy, grandmother and hostess to the gathering. Others swelling the family gathering were Mrs. William C. Gilbert, paternal grandmother, and Michael P. Reidy, maternal grandfather.

With so many relatives around, the ingenious accomplishments of the 6-week-old were discussed fully and retold to visitors. High point of the baby's actions yesterday was a "telephone conversation" with a sailor uncle who called from Chapel Hill, N. C. At first, Gale Cecilia was so good humored that she wouldn't make a sound for her proud uncle. But when a grandmother suggested that the baby should cry into the receiver so her uncle would know she was there, the infant immediately obliged with a lusty bawl.

Human Greed Caused War, D. C. Pastor Says in Sermon

The Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor of Takoma Lutheran Church, 7th and Dahlia sts. nw., yesterday blamed human greed for the present war.

"Christ preached against greed, and he lived a life thoroughly without greed," said Mr. Pfeiffer. "He told mankind to live as He lived and they would be supremely happy."

"Have men followed his advice?" asked the minister. "Not in the least. America refused to banish greed. She desired to have the gold that she could get from the Japanese in return for the scrap-iron. America didn't care whether the Japanese melted that scrap-iron down and made bombs and guns out of it to blast the helpless Chinese to bits.

"What did America care? She was raking in the shekels. Now, when those bombs and guns are directed at us, we, instead of putting the blame on ourselves, are ready to question whether the Christian religion is worth very much if it can't banish war from the earth.

The economic and spiritual struggles of an Irish-Catholic immigrant family at the turn of the century were depicted yesterday by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation.

Preaching a book sermon based on Betty Smith's best-seller, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Rabbi Gerstenfeld said that it was on this "tree of family life" that the old world immigrants staged their hopes for a future in America, "a future that would prove to be less economic trial and deprivation than they knew in the country of their forbears."

The temptations of living in wartime Washington were discussed yesterday by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant First Presbyterian Church, who said, in part:

"Now let me say a special word to young matrons who have married in haste and may repose now in loneliness. You can't run about like you used to do. You have given yourself, body, mind and heart, to that young man in the South Pacific or up in the Aleutians, from whom you haven't heard for weeks and months and may never hear again. Your temptations are going to be very great. Chaplains write to us from the front that this is one of their real problems—to allay the concern that disturbs the thoughts and imaginations of the men in their long waiting hours regarding the wife whom they have left and perhaps the child whom they have never seen. This text has a special word to you. Don't write complaining letters to him. What he needs is encouragement and cheer. Play your part in the privileged position that destiny has assigned you in this vast world-wide warfare. Here is something you can do, and who knows but thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

R. G. Carroll Dies Of Heart Attack

Raymond G. Carroll, writer and newspaperman, died at him home in the Westchester Apartments at 11:30 last night of a heart attack.

Former Paris correspondent for the New York World and Philadelphia Public Ledger, he was a correspondent with the AEF in 1917. Recently he had written for Canadian newspapers and magazines under the pen name "Arnold Garrycolm."

A native of Buffalo, Mr. Carroll came to Washington about 8 years ago. He was the author of several books and pamphlets including "Paris, the Real, as Seen Today" and "The Prairie Patriarch."

Scouts Begin Paper Collection Today

Washington Boy Scouts and cubs will begin a canvass of homes and offices in their respective areas today to collect waste paper in the intensified salvage campaign sponsored by The Washington Post and the District Salvage Committee.

The scouts will distribute pledges asking contributors to designate one day a week on which the paper may be collected. Paper needed in the salvage drive includes magazines, newspapers, corrugated boxes, brown paper and books. Waste paper should be separated into specific grades and tied securely in bundles, 20 pounds each, for collection by the scouts on specific days.

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

Lost Children
THERE you are!
Get me out of here!
Mr. O'Malley just left to—
Nonsense. A little man with wings! In a crowded store!
He said to wait—
A fine commotion he'd cause if he really was here, Barnaby.
It's funny he hasn't caused a commotion.
Yet.
CRASH!
CUSHLAMOCHREE!
Mom! There he is! At the construction toy counter!

Greek Rites Honor Dead D.C. Airman

Members of the Capital's Greek colony yesterday paid homage to Staff Sergt. Louis Skiades, first District man of their nationality to die in this war.

More than 400 worshipers gathered at the Greek Orthodox Church of St. Constantine and Helen, 6th and C sts. sw., to hear Sergeant Skiades eulogized at a memorial mass celebrated by Father Thomas Daniels, pastor.

Principal speaker at the service was Robert Tate Allan, Washington Post church editor, who pictured Sergeant Skiades as "a symbol of all those men and women of the United Nations who, without hate in their hearts, fight for a righteous cause."

Allan recalled that Sergeant Skiades, 26-year-old Air Forces gunner, served 15 months in the Pacific area and was decorated by General MacArthur for having shot down 11 Jap planes. After being transferred back to the United States, he became an instructor at an airbase in Florida, where he crashed to his death about a month ago. He was buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

The speaker said that if the gunner could speak from his grave in Arlington, he would say to us:

"'I fought, not in a spirit of hate or revenge, but to get this nasty business over soon as possible, in order to pave the way for a decent society in which all men, regardless of race, color or creed, can share equally, when they have proved to society that they deserve to have a part in building a decent world. My task is over. You pick up the torch and carry on. Think not of me. Think of my buddies who will return after the war. They will want more than gay, homecoming parties. They will want jobs, they will want a say in the kind of a peace we are going to have.'"

The famous poem, "High Flight," which was written by Pilot Officer John Magee, jr., of the Canadian Royal Air Force, shortly before he crashed to his death over England, was read as a tribute to Sergeant Skiades. Magee was a Washingtonian.

Multiple Duties

Keech Known As Capital's Legal Master

(The fifth article of a series—A primer of District government.)

Richmond B. Keech is the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia and as such its legal master.

Due to the District governmental organization, a compromise between municipal government and Federal dependency, Keech is acting as State Attorney General as well as a municipal attorney.

KEECH

As State Attorney, for instance, he represents Washington in public utility actions. On the other hand, he represents the community in all civil and criminal matters, from action in Juvenile Court to the United States Supreme Court.

Drafts Ordinances

It is Keech's function to draft ordinances and other legislation for submission to Congress. Keech is the man responsible for the District income tax law. He drafted it and pressed arguments for it before the House and Senate.

Keech, in his position, is the Delphic Oracle not only for the Commissioners but for all department heads. His office, which usually means him, is a member of virtually all District boards in which legislative and judicial opinions are indicated. Among them are Police and Fire Trial Boards, licenses, Police and Firemen's Retirement Board and the Board of Revocation and Review.

He also serves as general counsel to the Public Utilities Commission, and it is here he slips out of the mantle of city attorney to become a champion of the State rights that the Federal Government denied the District when it was created.

PUC deals with rates and services of public utilities, which is a function of state. In recent years Keech had to appear frequently as State's attorney because of numerous rate-reduction proceedings before the commission.

James H. Flanagan, PUC chairman, however, usually has worked up his rate reduction orders from the hard facts of corporation earnings in excess of normal interest returns on investments. Keech's defense of reductions, then, usually becomes a matter of form for in most cases a Flanagan order stands.

There are a great many citizens who have had their ears pinned back by Keech. These were the ladies and gentlemen who protested paying taxes here because they thought they were not domiciled in the District on account of maintaining legal residence elsewhere.

Hardly Ever Win

Such citizens hardly ever win against Keech even though, oddly enough, another District department, the Tax Appeal Board, said they did not have to pay. Keech carried one case into the Supreme Court to obtain a reversal of the Tax Board findings, which had been sustained by the Court of Appeals.

With a salary budget of $132,782, Keech keeps an office staff of 42 employes. His background for his work includes:

From 1930-34 he was people's counsel, appointed by President Hoover to care for the interest of utilities consumers, under the act of 1926. He was reappointed in 1934 by President Roosevelt, after serving interim as a member of the PUC. He resigned as people's counsel in 1940 to become corporation counsel.

He is the fellow who has the answer when commissioners or other District officials drop in and say:

"Look, Rich, can I do this without getting my neck in a noose?"

Admirers Pay Tribute To Kreisler

By Ray C. B. Brown

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Fritz Kreisler in a violin recital on Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Assisting artist: Carl Lamson. Program of compositions by Tartini, Paganini, Chausson, Rimski-Korsakov and Arbos.

No better proof could be adduced of the affection in which the public holds Fritz Kreisler than the audience that filled Constitution Hall and most of the platform yesterday afternoon. It was the second recital that he has given here since the accident that nearly deprived the world of his artistry, and the welcome was as cordial as it had been on the previous occasion. The recipient was noticeably moved by the tribute, and one felt in his playing the response that was more eloquent than speech. The Kreisler tone and the Kreisler bowing exerted their charm as of old, and the allotted time sped all too quickly for those who had come to be charmed.

The perfection of his style and the ease of his technique were first observed in his performance of the "Devil's Thrill" Sonata in G minor by Giuseppe Tartini, a familiar work given a fresh and delightfully spontaneous reading. Tartini, who was seven years younger than Bach and died in the year of Beethoven's birth, is credited with 150 sonatas and 140 concertos, some of which were published in the cities where he lived at different times: Naples, Paris, Amsterdam and London. The G minor sonata in question was found in manuscript by Pierre Bailott and first printed in Jean Baptiste Cartier's "L'Art du Violin" 28 years after Tartini's death.

Seemingly artless virtuosity was disclosed in Paganini's B minor concerto, which he played in the Sivori edition. Other items on the program were Ernest Chausson's beautiful "Poeme," Kreisler's edition of Rimski-Korsakov's "Fantasia on Russian Themes," and a tango by Enrique Fernandez Arbos.

National Gallery of Art presents Oscar Shumski, violinist, and Earl Wild, pianist, on Sunday night. Program of compositions by Sinding, Ysaye, Saint-Saens, Smetana, Scott, Ibert and Vieniavski.

It goes without saying that the east garden court of the National Gallery of Art was crammed with auditors last evening when those two talented members of the U. S. Navy Orchestra, Oscar Shumski and Earl Wild, played a recital of exciting quality. They began with Christian Sinding's three-movement Suite in A minor, Op. 10, a delightfully imaginative work that is too infrequently heard. Its Norse atmosphere is as authentic as in the music of Greig, and it has melodic charm.

Shumski brought forward Eugene Ysaye's Sonata in G minor for solo violin, one of six pratically unknown to the public.

The first part of the program closed with a dashing and brilliant performance of Saint-Saens' D minor sonata, in which that versatile composer acknowledged certain obligations to Cesar Franck in the style of the first movement. After the intermission came four shorter works: Smetana's "Aus der Heimat," Cyril Scott's slightly mystical "Poeme Erotique," Ibert's amusing "Little White Donkey" and Vieniavski's scintillant A major polonaise.

Senora de Danis Home After Gripsholm Trip

Around Half the World in Wartime Is Wedding Trip for Attache's Wife

By Martha Rhyne

When the exchange ship, Gripsholm, slid into New York Harbor just in time to make her absolute deadline for safety, pretty, tired Senora de Danis, wife of the Spanish Minister-Attaché here, was almost as glad to get back as those men and women who had been interned in the East since war came in the Pacific.

For this striking English-born diplomat's wife was the only woman in the official party aboard the Gripsholm when it sailed in September. It was her honeymoon trip for she and Senor Danis were married during the summer and this was their first chance to get away for a while. It was his mission to look after the interests of Latin-American repatriates. His bride is the former Mrs. Irene Gough Kingston-Williams.

It was quite unusual, a tour around half the world's coast line in the midst of a war from which there is little escape in any part of the world. "Sharks were as menacing a thing as we saw," she chuckled in a funny under-the-lip manner which doubtless charms all her listeners.

There are many things about the trip which she remembers often and thrills to. There were the magnificent receptions in each port; there was meeting with diplomats which her husband had known in other parts of the world; there was Rio de Janeiro, she knows no adequate adjectives for it.

Impressed With South Africa

South Africa impressed her with its highly developed civilization and with its request, of all things, for more and more immigrants. "That does seem strange," said the diplomat's wife, "when all the other countries are full to the brim and are discouraging immigration."

The exchange of passengers was made in Portuguese East India; the trip required thirteen months of planning and exactly one hour for the actual exchange. In the capital Goa, for a few days before the Japanese ship arrived, Senora de Danis did a lot of shopping for silver and other souvenirs, practically nonexistent here. "I bought so many lovely things, she said, and then I met so many nice people on the trip back that I scarcely had anything left when I was through giving presents."

Being entertained by the governor of the province on the Malibar coast was a big event of the trip. Attendants came for the Danis' on the royal barge, escorted them across the bay to the magnificent palace, a satin-costumed attendant opened the gates with great pomp, a golden bell tolled a welcome for them. The governor and twenty-five Portuguese ladies formed the dinner party for the diplomatic contingent.

Keen Observer Of Social Order

Philosophical and keenly aware of everything, the minister's wife who has blue eyes, petal white skin and dark hair, was struck with the contrast of the pomp of the rulers and the squalor of the very people who aspire to gilded castles for their rulers. "They seem perfectly content," she said, amazed, "yet they just don't seem to have modern conveniences—the contrast is baffling." Wearing a black lace mantilla and a black short evening gown trimmed with sequins, Senora de Danis is well on the way to becoming a Spaniard, even though on the Gripsholm trip she first attempted Spanish and learned a lot.

Senora de Danis, is international. From Britain, a Mexican citizen (she had to be Espano-Americano to marry the minister-attache) and a Washingtonian mostly. She's been here three years and has only two complaints—she wants a larger apartment and a Spanish maid—and again she gives with that wonderful chuckle.

Ambassador to Return Here After Visit

Travel is the order of the day for diplomats, who keep on the go in these turbulent times. To return early this week from Argentina, where he went to attend the wedding of his daughter, is the Ambassador of Belgium, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz. His wife is not expected back before the first of the year. Another Belgian delegate the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Paul Henry Spaak, has left for Canada and will return to England from there. Newly arrived at the Belgian Embassy is Maj. Endre Bigwood, Military Attache, replacing Col. Pierre Diepenrykz, who has left for London to represent his government at the Netherlands legation.

Stopping here en route to his homeland is Dr. Pablo Arturo Suarez, who represented Ecuador at the Relief and Rehabilitation Conference in Atlantic City. Also here from Ecuador is Senora Carlos Dousdebes, chief of the Labor Office in that country, who is en route to New York, from where he will depart for South America. Still another Ecuadorian, Senorita Leticia Guerrero Valenzuela, daughter of the late Senor Dr. Alberto Guerrero Martinez, former President of Ecuador, has come to Washington for the winter to study.

Washingtonians Honor Midshipmen With Luncheon

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 12 (AP).—War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes and South Carolina Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith are among the prominent guests who have been invited to attend a buffet luncheon today for the entertainment of midshipmen at the academy from South Carolina.

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Leclerc of Washington announced that they would hold the luncheon at the home of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. James A. Duncan who are occupying one of the county's historic homes—Ogle Hall. All of South Carolina's Congressmen and Senators and Governor and Mrs. O'Conor are among the guests invited.

Dr. Leclerc is connected with the Department of Agriculture in charge of food shipments to Russia.

Hundreds of Guests Mingle At Shoreham for Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Harding Celebrated Silver Wedding Day in 'Big Way'

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

Dreams of celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary in a "big way" came true for Mr. and Mrs. John C. Harding of Bethesda, Md., last night when they entertained 500 friends at a 5 until 7 o'clock party at the Shoreham Hotel.

Given in the west ballroom the affair drew a large contingent of prominent Washingtonians as well as friends from Virginia and Maryland. Mrs. Harding, the former Ann Somerville, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Somerville 2nd of Washington and the late Mr. Somerville, was assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. Michael McInerney of Washington, her sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Somerville 3d of Kenwood, Md. Mrs. Harrison Somerville of Washington, another sister-in-law, and Mrs. William E. Furey of Bethesda.

Departing from the usual custom of wearing a corsage the hostess wore a fan-shaped spray of white carnations across the girdle of her black gown trimmed in sequins. All her assistants wore corsages of Belmont gardenias to carry out the floral decorations of green and white.

Throughout the cocktail hours a string quartette played. After the party Mr. and Mrs. Harding gave a dinner for their assistants and their husbands and also Mrs. Harding's brother, Andrew Jackson Somerville. Married in Rockville, Md., at the Methodist Manse the couple has lived in Bethesda for the last seven years and prior to that they resided in Washington. Their son, Lieut. John C. Harding, jr., is a pilot in the Army Air Forces stationed in Greenville, Tex. Mr. Harding is the some of Mrs. Damon W. Harding of Washington.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ted Bausermann of Woodstock, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller of Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. Carl Volkmayer of Lochkearn, Md.

Among the Washingtonians there were Judge and Mrs. Edward Curran, Judge and Mrs. Bolitha Laws, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bralove, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brejning, and Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Keech.

Purely Personal

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun will be hosts at a formal dinner tomorrow evening.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope will entertain at a dinner party Thursday evening.

Representative and Mrs. Maurice Sullivan of Nevada gave a tea yesterday afternoon in their apartment at Harvard Hall.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, will be hostess at tea in her apartment Tuesday afternoon, December 21, from 5 to 7 o'clock.

The Surgeon General and Mrs. Norman T. Kirk will be the guests in whose honor officers of the medical department of the military district of Washington will entertain at a late afternoon party tomorrow. It will take place at the Mayflower from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Rear Admiral Reginald H. Portal, assistant chief of the naval staff for Great Britain, has arrived in the Capital and is staying at the Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew B. Claussen and their daughter, Miss Marion Burt Claussen, have gone to New York City for a short stay. They expect to return to their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel Thursday.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Self-Reliant Career Woman, No Love-Starved Spinster, Wonders Whether to Marry Snobbish Officer From European Country, Stationed Here

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am on furlough from my profession, doing special work here. On arriving in Washington last spring, I met Stefen, an officer sent here, to aid his country's fight for freedom. From then on, we were together,—at first occasionally; and every day during the month before he left. Stefen is charming, intelligent and well educated. He is 39 and I am 32. His business connections brought him to the United States before the war and he knows this country and speaks English well; and I speak his native tongue.

He told me, early in our acquaintance, that he had a brief, unfortunate marriage in his early twenties. Other than that, I know nothing about the women in his life. And once when I made a humorous reference to the men in mine, he told me very earnestly that he didn't want to hear anything about it. I have often wondered why he singled me out. While I am a good looking woman, with poise and "color" in the professional world in which I have been successful, socially my reserve makes me appear aloof and rather shy. But we are happy together and usually talk far into the night. While the physical attraction between us is great, there has been little lovemaking. "Petting," as such, evidently is not a custom of his country.

Now he writes me that he will return here soon, for several months' stay; and I am faced with the question of marriage. Only his going away kept this from being a real issue before. I am no love-starved spinster, appraising her first admirer. I have been in love before; and during Stefen's absence I have gone out with other men. A continental man's courtship is delightful; but what about marriage between a European man and an American career woman? Stefen is of good family; so am I. He has some money of his own. My people, once wealthy, have not been so since my childhood. When the war is over, his work will require his being in the United States about half the time; and he says our home would be here.

STEFEN IS CLASS conscious, intolerant of imperfection, and (from things I've pieced together) his ideas on all aspects of the husband-wife relationship differ from mine. I have been on my own so long that I am quite independent and almost self-sufficient, although I always intended to marry. I would have a husband very much in love with me; and a lovely home. Stefen doesn't seem to be particularly found of children, and my age might make child-bearing more difficult than I previously anticipated. I don't want to marry without a good chance for lifetime happy marriage . . . You've probably surmised by now that my heart tells me, "Yes"; and my head says, "No." What do you think? C. O. B.

Is She Ready to Waive Independence of Mind?

DEAR C. O. B.: Whether to marry Stefen depends entirely, it seems to me, upon whether you are willing to make a career, after marriage, of being Stefen's wife,—finding as much creative satisfaction in making good in that challenging and doubtless difficult assignment as you have erstwhile found in becoming a professional success on your own. From what you say of Stefen,—and it is to be supposed that your faculties of objective discernment are keen and trustworthy, from professional usage,—from what you say of Stefen, harmonious marriage to him would involve, first of all, for you, expedient or sentimental waiver of your strictly American theories concerning a wife's full partnership with her husband, in the sense of sharing co-equal authority with him, in exercising independence of judgment and action, socially, intellectually and perhaps also professionally and economically.

Your business as Stefen's wife,—as I daresay he would construe,—would be to please him. And any failure to confirm his "perfectionist" expectations in that regard,—whether due to lack of comprehension of his racial or individualistic standards; or to clean-cut difference of viewpoint, casually defined and supported by you as a matter of personal integrity,—doubtless would draw an "intolerant" reaction from him, ranging from gentle disapproval to tensely expressed chagrin to autocratic decree. In other words, you could only keep out of hot water, in conjugal relation to him, by making it your life work as his wife to be the ideal Mrs. Stefen, from his view; which probably would be a far cry from the performance you would give, if you were unself-consciously enjoying life as the wife of Jim Brown, who hailed from South Bend, Indiana, let's say.

He Is an Autocrat, Bland and Unabashed

IT APPEARS that Stefen's fixed and ingrained assurance of mind has already put your more flexible and assimilative personality under comparative eclipse,—as witness your statement: "From things I've pieced together, his ideas on all aspects of the husband-wife relationship differ from mine." This statement ill-consorts with your previous comment, to-wit: "But we are happy together and usually talk far into the night." If it is your custom to talk happily together late into the night, and you are nevertheless obliged to resort to introspection, and to "piecing together" of glancing impressions derived from his conversations, in order to compare notes on his views versus yours,—concerning factors vital to rapport in marriage,—then (as Walt Whitman wrote) "the gaze of your personalities never meet."

And we may infer that Stefen hasn't bothered to subscribe to the democratic process of seeking an honest meeting-of-minds, for the significant reason that he blandly believes your views don't really matter, and that he is without need either to examine your traditional convictions or individual theories, or to exhaustively explain and persuasively argue his,—a procedure which would tacitly concede your inalienable right to full consideration as a spiritually free human being,—because your compliance with his code and philosophy is taken for granted by him, as a mutually understood inevitable sequence, in the event you become his wife and thus, by his code, give yourself to his keeping.

Question by Which To Test Preference

SO, THAT'S what I think about you and Stefen. Since your head says, "no," and your heart says, "yes," ask yourself this question: Is life with Stefen, at any cost, definitely preferable to life without him? I imagine your reaction is,—"Well, I could hardly say that." And my opinion is,—If you had an American suitor as personable as Stefen suing your hand in marriage, you would kiss off Stefen with only the mildest romantic regret, M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

That Dread Specter

If the dread spectre of INFLATION appears over America soon, the women of the country will have to shoulder a great deal of the blame, Office of War Information warns. For women are spending the greatest sums on record right now for clothing and luxury items such as jewelry, furs and cosmetics.

Men Diet Sensibly to Reduce; Wives Should Not Reform Them

By Ida Jean Kain

A woman will go on a diet at the drop of a hat whether or not she needs to—almost any diet, as long as it promises to take off so many pounds in so few days. A man is much more sensible about his dieting. When he retrenches on the calories, it is because his weight is unquestionably above what it should be for his height and health.

So don't try to put your husband on the diet you may have picked up from some teatime conversation. One woman, whose husband is 80 pounds overweight, wrote to ask for a reducing diet of 600 calories a day for him. That is only enough for one man-size meal! If he stayed on that few calories for long, she would be soon a widow.

Don't Starve the Man

The nutrition yardstick sets the normal calorie allowance for the man in sedentary work at 2500 a day, and for the moderately active man at 3000 a day. A diet of 1000 calories less than the normal requirement is safe and the man in sedentary work should get around 1500 calories a day to reduce on.

The 1500 calories a day allow for plenty of food, provided you choose the menus with an eye to the calories. Plan the diet around the protective foods, leave off the extras and cut out the fattening dessert. The dietary restrictions should be: No fried foods, no gravies, not over one pat of butter a meal (a restriction you are probably making anyway), little or no French dressing and mayonnoise, and absolutely no pie, pastry and such for dessert.

Reducing Menus for Men

Your husband will be better fed and will lose more weight for having a good breakfast of sliced orange or one-half grapefruit; one or two eggs and a thin slice of toast, and coffee than he can on orange juice, toast and coffee. The protein in the eggs helps him to burn calories faster. To avoid calories in fat, soft boil or poach the eggs, or scramble with milk instead of butter in the top of a double boiler. Don't put the marmalade and jelly on the breakfast table.

A good lunch on his diet consists of a meat or cheese sandwich, a vegetable soup or salad, and a glass of skim milk or buttermilk. Or, he might have the day's special with just one slice of bread and no gravy or dessert.

Dinner may be pared down to the essentials: a green leafy or yellow vegetable and potatoes, a green salad with very little dressing, a roll and fresh fruit.

He is more apt to stick with this kind of diet because he will feel in the pink while reducing. He many even learn to like this list of foods so well that he will change his eating habits, and that will be the end of his weight troubles.

Mildew Preventive

Here is something worth while—a chemical treatment that will prevent mildew on fabrics, rubber, leather, paper, paints, plastics. It gives enduring protection against bacteria and fungus growth, and is already used by many processors of fabrics and laundries. Chances are it will be used on most things we buy after the war.—ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The cradle-cap which gathers so often on top of baby's head is probably due to inadequate cleansing of this particular area of the scalp. The crust gathers over the "soft spot," because mothers are so afraid to touch it and an accumulation of oil and dirt and fuzz comes about rather easily.

For this type of scale the usual treatment is to wash the head vigorously over the area concerned, using some such cleansing agent as borax on a damp wash cloth and rinsing well afterwards. Then, when the head is perfectly dry, some salve containing boric acid or borax (ask your druggist for suggestions) may be applied and left on until the next bath period. Successive treatments of this type should cure ordinary cradle-cap.

But the scale, similar to eczema, which gathers on the head and often wanders down onto the forehead, which is the result of an unbalanced diet, is not so easy to cure.

This type of scale may be dry, flaky and itchy or it may tend to ooze a fluid when the scales are forcibly removed. The scale may have a bad odor, which further distresses the conscientious mother.

Try to find what is wrong with this baby's diet. Is it some food to which the baby has reacted adversely from its initial inclusion in the diet? Some of the common foods, milk, eggs, and wheat often are the most frequent offenders. It might be the result of too much fat in the diet, fat being an element some babies digest with difficulty. The ordinary fats to which the baby is exposed are cream in the milk, butter, bacon, any of the plain, fish-liver oils.

One must experiment to discover what is offending to the baby and by its removal make it possible for this eczematous scale to clear up. It is natural for all such eczematous rashes to tend to get better and then return. One must keep track of results over a lengthy period to be able to give any food a good reputation.

Mothers! Watch Out For Epidemic Colds

With so many doctors being called to the colors, you must be more careful than ever before about your family's health. So this should be interesting news to you... Certified results of medically-supervised tests among 2650 children show that those who followed Vicks Plan had

FEWER COLDS . . SHORTER COLDS

Put VICKS PLAN To Work Today!

Right in your own home this simple, easy-to-follow home guide may do less—or it may do even more for you and your family than this remarkable record indicates. But right now—this Vicks Plan is certainly worth trying at once! Get full details in your package of Vicks.

BRIEFLY, HERE'S WHAT YOU DO:

Observe A Few Simple Health Rules. Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Avoid crowds and people who have colds.

IF A COLD THREATENS, put a few drops of clinic-tested Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril at first sniffle or sneeze. Use as directed in package. This specialized medication is expressly designed to aid your natural defense against colds—and if used in time, Va-tro-nol helps prevent many colds from developing. (Even when your head is all stuffed up from a mean head cold, Vicks Va-tro-nol relieves sniffly, sneezy distress, makes breathing easier.)

WHEN A COLD STRIKES, or slips by precautions, rub clinic-tested Vicks VapoRub on back, as well as on throat and chest at bedtime. VapoRub penetrates to the cold-congested upper bronchial tubes with soothing medicinal vapors. It stimulates throat, chest, and back surfaces like a warming poultice. This penetrating-stimulating action works for hours to relieve miseries of colds... invites restful, comforting sleep!

NOTE: If the miserable symptoms of a cold are not relieved promptly—or if more serious trouble seems to threaten—call in your family doctor right away.

Something About the House

Don't despair of observing Christmas this year merely because you couldn't get within 10 yards of the junk jewelry or the quilted satin bed jackets when you went downtown. Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey president of the Do Something About It League has a way out. It is to go into your various squirrels' nests about the house and give away part of your long accumulated and unused loot.

Mrs. DeGoofey

Mrs. DeGoofey told her press conference yesterday that she was sponsoring a Give What You Have movement as a solution to both the shopping and the housing problems.

"Many persons," she said," are now so crowded in their homes and apartments with the stuff they have accumulated through bridal and going away showers, Christmas presents, and scare buying that they can scarcely find space to stretch their legs. By giving part of this away we shall at least get the junk we have into circulation instead of adding to it by joining in the spending spree. I have drawn up a list of idle articles most of us could find about the house if we tried hard enough. Here they are:

Get Guest Towels Into Circulation

"Hand embroidered guest towels. No woman on earth needs more than two of these to decorate the bathroom. Why should we permit 5, 10 and even 20-year-old guest towels to turn yellow in our linen closets when possibly some persons could be found who would be willing to wipe their hands on them?

"Pillow slips with heavy lace or tatting that somebody's Aunt Lutie put her eyes out making Also Philippine table cloths, Mexican portieres, Indian baskets, etc., that traveling friends bring you and that are always around cluttering up things.

"Sets of matching towels and washrags that have never been taken out of their cellophane boxes. Also the seductive Hollywood nightgowns you have been accumulating for years to wear on a very special trip or to don in event of a fire.

"Fussy aprons with cute little ribbon bows—the ones that always are showered on career women who don't do their own cooking, and on housewives who scrub their own kitchens.

"The millions of unused handkerchiefs in boxes in bureau drawers presented by friends with the 'You can't have too many handkerchiefs' philosphy; the bottles of cologne and toilet water that have gradually been losing strength on closet shelves.

"The extra electric toasters, mixers, sandwich grills, cigaret lighters, etc., that were 'exchanged' on the Christmas when they were the rage; the dozens of compacts accumulated as bridge prizes, going away gifts, Christmas presents, etc., through the years.

Give Away Things Saved for 'Some' Day

"The superfluous candlesticks, bonbon dishes, salad bowls, cocktail shakers, book ends, luncheon sets that were left behind after the last wedding.

"All the things too nice or too impractical to use—the pale peach satin comfort that slides off the bed when you reach for it on a cold night, the beauteous pastel sofa cushion that everyone who comes near the couch avoids, the fancy bed jacket that you are saving to take to the hospital IF you should ever have to go.

"The cache of hoarded canned goods in the basement or attic bought in panic just before the food rationing began and which you are never going to get around to using before it spoils.

"These are just a few samples of what is in nearly every house," explained Mrs. DeGoofey. "Now why should we help inflation along by buying more stuff when this can be put to use? Why should we join the shopping maniacs downtown when we can reach into the drawer, trunk or basement and find something we are selfishly saving for the 'some day' that will never come?

"My plan also will meet another problem that has been dogging women for decades. It will at least have a use for all those beautiful empty Christmas boxes they have been saving and which have now reached the status of a fire menace."

Typhoid Spread by Carriers; Many of Them Still With Us

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

The Los Angeles newspapers carry the account of a small epidemic of typhoid fever. There were 21 cases in all. Of these 11 were caused by carriers and 10 of these carriers were grandmothers.

The history of typhoid carriers is a long and ghastly one. The case that opened the eyes of bacteriologists to the possibility that typhoid could be spread by carriers was the famous Typhoid Mary.

Typhoid Mary's History

Mary Mallon was a kindly, genial soul who wouldn't have done anyone the slightest bit of harm.

She was a cook, and a good one. But everywhere that Mary went typhoid was sure to go. Finally the health authorities in New York persuaded Mary to allow them to examine her. They found she was full of typhoid germs, and any food she prepared would be contaminated.

She was incarcerated and remained a prisoner for the rest of her life, a great injustice, because what the health authorities should have done was to vaccinate the whole community. That was in 1909, when typhoid vaccination was new and unproved.

Since then there have been innumerable epidemics of typhoid caused by carriers. The recital of these tales is a horror.

At a church supper, eight women were employed to dice potatoes. Four of them were afterward proved to be carriers. Warm potatoes are the finest culture medium for typhoid in the world. Of the attendants at the church supper something like 80 came down with typhoid and about 10 died.

All food handlers should have a test to see whether they are typhoid carriers or not, especially the middle-aged and elderly ones, who grew up in the typhoid era. But in these rushed times it becomes "impractical" and of course when grandma offers to help out in the privacy of the home it would be "impolite" to suggest examining her.

It is a remarkable but perfectly understandable situation. Anyone old enough to be a grandmother was young in the days—the so-called gay nineties—when typhoid fever was an almost universal disease. Of those who have had typhoid it is estimated that 2 per cent are carriers. Some put the percentage much higher.

Typhoid Spread by Carriers

A carrier is a person who never gets rid of living typhoid bacilli. They may be in the gallbladder, the crypts of the bowel or in the saliva. At any rate, they are always on the carrier's fingers.

I venture to say that now that water supplies are carefully supervised at least 80 per cent of typhoid fever is conveyed by carriers.

The answer to the problem is absurdly simple. Everyone should have typhoid vaccination. Yet I will guess that of 100 people who read this statement, all of whom have never had typhoid fever or never been vaccinated, who nod approval of the advice, not 5 will have a course of typhoid vaccination during the coming week.

Give yourself a typhoid vaccination for Christmas!

Nebraska Society To Hold Yule Party

Mrs. Ralph Van Orsdel is chairman of the entertainment committee for the annual Christmas party sponsored by the Nebraska State Society which will be held in the Statler Hotel, Thursday at 9 p. m.

All Nebraskans in Washington whether members of the society or not are invited to attend. Included in the evening's entertainment will be dancing and the awarding of 10 door prizes.

Assisting Mrs. Van Orsdel on the entertainment committee are Mrs. Lloyd Wilson, Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Mrs. James M. Souby, Mrs. Kenneth Wherry, Mrs. Howard Buffett and Mrs. R. L. Cochran.

Arrangements are being made to accommodate 2000 Nebraskans now living in Washington.

SOCIETY MANSION INTO BISTRO. The Manor Club at 2108 16th st., better known to Washingtonians as the old Phillips mansion will become an upper bracket night spot on New Year's Eve. The original gilded Phillips ballroom will be the main focus of activity, but there'll also be a dining room and cocktail lounge. Suave Bob Demarest, formerly of Delmonico's, is the manager . . . Dance music will be by a New York orchestra, now being selected and the star singer Jeanne Reed, formerly of Manhattan's Clubs "18" and "21" . . . The set-up will be one of the largest in town, with room for around 500 And listen to this good news—No cover, no minimum, and there'll be a "rolling bar" that's expected to get by every table on a 10 or 15 minute schedule!

Enric Madriguera, who played for months lately at Del Rio, will be honored at the Pan-American Union today by being named "musical ambassador of the Americas" in a scroll to be presented to him by Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union.

"MUSTS" FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW. Tonight's second "Stardust Night" at Restaurant "400" . . . John Hoystradt's opening in the Embassy Room of the Statler tomorrow . . . The first is a demonstration of the cleverness of our local boys and girls, the second a feast of satirical finesse.

QUEEN VICTORIA HAD SOMETHING—MAYBE. We go for Alan Dale over at Paul Young's, both when he's good and naughty and when he's only good. But his funniest intervals are as clean and fizzy as a bubble bath . . . Journeying over to Olmsted's Club, where anything is likely to happen, we found Imogene Coca using material as amusing as a page out of the New Yorker and quite as printable . . . Don't get us wrong. We also laughed mightily at Olmsted's over "Dr. McGrath, the Osteopath," as delivered with an engaging leer by Hal Yates . . . And we've never seen anyone who did not become converted immediately to Owen Parker, now at the Troika, after one strophe of "The Beeches and the Bassetts" . . . This reminds one of the troubles of "Jivin' Jack" Shaffer who used to hold forth at the Casino Royal. (He's in the Army now so it should be all right to tell it.) The police ladies used to lecture Jack regularly. He always said "Yessum," deleted the naughty verses, wrote new and worse ones! And waited for the coppettes to come in again and instruct him in propriety . . . The borderline between the acceptable and the nonacceptable in matters risque is as sharp as a fence of razor blades, and that's where the poor entertainers have to perch!

Ensign Burt Lopatin of the Coast Guard, owner of Burt's Trans-Lux, who's home on a Christmas furlough

Ruby Foo's are shooting for a December 28 opening for their new Tahitian Room. Ditto for the Old New Orleans' Chateau Internationale. But they'll both surely be open for New Year's Eve—or bust.

WARTIME VISITORS. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Wilbur McReynolds often visit Club Jalna and singer Bernice Parks is having Mrs. McReynolds' poem, "Lights at Sea" set to music, will soon sing it. . . . At Mayfair we saw Major and Mrs. Russell Duncan (the major's fresh back from overseas) and Comdr. and Mrs. Eugene Meacham. . . . At Hi Hat was handsome Denny Calvert, who used to greet all comers there. He's in a mysterious "hush-hush" camp that can't be mentioned, calls it "the little camp that isn't there" . . . In the Mayflower Lounge was Soldier Herb Bass, husband of singer Carole Page. His C. O. gave him two days extra leave for bringing Carole down to sing for the boys at Camp Lee. . . . Bandleader Rocco Terrone is practically a soldier visitor at Treasure Island now. He's been tapped for khaki, will be in it in two weeks.

Claude Glase, clever singing bassist, has joined Tommy Suiter's unit in Cafe Caprice. Newest Caprice tricks include three-way vocals by Tommy, Claude and Norman Sullivan.

BALALAIKA'S "CHRISTMAS REVUE" will open next Monday, December 20, promises to be a swirl of holiday color and fun. There'll be a lavish "Boyar Dance"—Russian Christmas carols and a jolly dolly comedy.

Army Hospital Trains Afford Best Facilities for Veterans

By John A. Moroso 3d

Aboard a Hospital Train in the U. S. A., Dec. 12 (AP).—The long road back home to thousands of American boys who have been maimed for life has been smoothed, cleansed and made as comfortable as possible by the Army service forces.

As a guest of the Army's Second Service Command, I have just spent three days aboard a swanky hospital train carrying the armless and legless, the blind and the partially insane from Halloran General Hospital in Staten Island to Fletcher General Hospital in Cambridge, Ohio.

It wasn't a pleasant experience. I had watched some of these lads fight on the beaches of Morocco and again in medieval Sicily.

Reporters met Capt. A. Donald McLane, commanding officer of this train and a former Englewood, N. J., surgeon at Halloran Hospital, and moments later we were watching 201 unsung heroes being loaded aboard a spotless hospital train. Some were able to walk; others were stretcher cases.

Army chaplains moved through the air-conditioned cars, distributing two packs of cigarets to each man and giving them candy and magazines. The men able to sit up were given parlor games and playing cards.

In our section, two pretty nurses tucked in blankets and sheets and raised pillows, seeing that every one was comfortable.

Two corpsmen assigned to each car helped these girls and our doctors wandered back and forth checking each patient.

These hospital trains have about everything. In the hospital ward cars, double-decker bunks running fore and aft have replaced the regular railway seats. There is a phonograph for each car and some cars have a central radio set with headphones for each patient. There is an emergency operating room, although the Army usually rushes an emergency patient to the nearest civilian hospital.

Each man wears a field card giving his name, serial number, the type of case and the treatment he needs enroute. One side of the card is colored to tell doctors and nurses the type of case at a glance—such as blue for mental, red for surgical ambulatory. Thirty surgical cases are accommodated in each car.

Halloran is an evacuation hospital and it operates trains to many parts of the country. Twenty-five trained nurses are used in a rotating pool to make the trips.

Doctors told us that about 30 per cent of the returning cases are mental. Some are curable. Psychiatrists give these lads the best possible care.

Water on these trains is chlorinated and is tested twice-daily for purity.

All lights go out at 9 p. m. Breakfast is served at 7 a. m. The litter cases are served in bed while the men who can walk hobble to the dining cars.

The trains do not operate at full speed because doctors try to avoid roughing up the patients. Abdominal cases are placed in the center of the cars because the ride is smoother there. The engineer warns the patients when he is going to stop by sounding two blasts. When he starts up he sounds three blasts.

Most of our mental cases appear pretty quiet. Many just sat and looked out of the windows but they were eager to talk.

Some of the boys were bitter about the war and what it had done to them. Others felt lucky to be alive.

One told me how Nazi soldiers put lye in bottles of wine and left the bottles where American soldiers would find them. When our boys drank this wine it burned their throats and some died. Others, left with a closed esophagus, are not expected to live more than a year.

Coming home Miss Hall, the senior nurse, told us it was her 87th trip on a hospital train—an indication of how many of our wounded are reaching home safely.

Ships Named After Solomons Heroes

Port Newark, N. J., Dec. 12 (INS).—Two heroes of the Solomons campaign were honored today at twin launchings of the destroyer escorts Eisner and Garfield Thomas from United States Steel's Federal Shipyard.

Mrs. Lester Eisner, jr., of New York, sponsored the Eisner in the name of her brother-in-law, the late Lieut. (j g) Jacques Rodney Eiser, USNR.

The Thomas was christened by Second Lieut. Betty K. Thomas, Army Medical Corps, of Fort McPherson, Ga. She gave it the name of her brother, the late Lieut. (j g) William Garfield Thomas, jr. USNR.

Council Evidently Feels The Family Can 'Take It'; Theater News and Gossip

A RECENT BULLETIN from Velma West Sykes, of Boxoffice Magazine, who serves as chairman of the National Screen Council, observes that, "Evidently the National Screen Council feels that the family can 'take' the grimmest aspects of war, for it voted the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for November to Twentieth Century-Fox's 'Guadalcanal Diary.' The picture can be said to be a graphic illustration of Churchill's immortal phrase: 'Blood, sweat and tears'. The Council selects that picture each month which is not only meritoriously outstanding, but good family film fare."

WILLIAM BENDIX

Much as he admires most that goes to make up the T. C.-F. picturization of the Richard Tregaskis book, now on view at Loew's Palace, this member of the council does not belong to the majority of its membership to which allusion is made. Our vote, as we recall it, was "Princess O'Rourke" as the best November eligible for the award, among those we had seen. "Guadalcanal Diary" was our second choice, for the precise reason that it seemed to us a shade harrowing for the enormous and constantly growing number of families who have lost, or may lose, loved ones on the global battle fronts. William Bendix is the one who does most to ameliorate that effect.

Perhaps we are not abreast of American amusement taste in this regard. At any rate, the voting of the November Award came out exactly in reverse—"Guadalcanal," the winner; "Princess," the runner-up. Honorable mentions, in the order of their popularity in the balloting, went to "Flesh and Fantasy," the initial Charles Boyer-Julien Duvivier production; "Battle of Russia," "The Iron Major" and "I Dood It," only two of which have been seen in the Capital.

New Link in Chain

Sidney Lust, operator of the theater circuit bearing his name in Washington and nearby Maryland, is lengthening his chain to include College Park, Md.

The new house, designed by John and Drew Eberson, noted theater architects, will be directly opposite the business section of College Park. Ultramodern in plan, it will be an enclosed stadium type of building with a seating capacity of 1000 and perfect sight lines from every seat. Included in the project are store spaces sufficient for the establishment of a new shopping center and a parking lot for approximately 300 cars.

Construction will begin immediately materials and equipment are available.

Have you a lady tromboniste in your home, heaven forbid? Capt. Raymond Hart, busily rehearsing Loew's Theaters Government Girls Band—and that's the first time we've heard of that—stands in need of three distaff sliphorn players and, of all things, a lady bassoonniste. Applicants may address Capt. Raymond Hart at Loew's Capitol Theater, or attend tonight's rehearsal at 7:30 o'clock in the Armory at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton sts. nw.

Color Stories

Warner Brothers short subjects for January and February will be gay with Technicolor, according to latest advices. Out of 17 subjects set for release, 11 have been executed in natural tints. Heading the list are two Technicolor "specials"—"Behind the Big Top," backstage views of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus in winter quarters, and "Task Force," story of the Coast Guard and amphibious operations.

The remaining 15 will be comprised of cartoon, dramatic and musical items, including a two-reel Western, "Gun to Gun."

All of which may be construed as just another indication that fulfillment is gradually creeping up on our persistent contention that ALL pictures should be made in natural color, if the screen is ever to achieve complete realism.

True to the fetich that "the show must go on," "The Patriots" did, for two weeks at the National. But only against odds. Removed from the cast for two days by illness during the first week, Julie Haydon was not the only member of the company who battled her one ninty-thousandth of the prevalent plague. Walter Hampden, who appeared in the pivotal role of Thomas Jefferson, arrived in town also heavily laden with germs. He was able to play the fortnight without missing a performance only through the daily ministrations and skill of Dr. Frank T. Shyne, whose remedial wizardly has saved more shows from closing than you can shake a stick at—if you happen to be a stick shaker-atter. His service to Mr. Hampden was a great boon to the box office. The local engagement of the Kingsley prize play grossed in the neighborhood of $40,000—which is nothing to be sneezed at, although it was!

Dots and Dashes

The United Nations' Victory Girls, Inc., has invitations out for a Christmas Party and Dance in the Rose Room of the Washington Hotel tomorrow night, 8 p. m. to 12:30 a. m. . . . In honor of the managers and staffs of the Loew Theaters and the Washington Press, if you please—or even if you don't. . . . And Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Department of Interior Auditorium, Mr. Harold Butler, H. M. Minister, is previewing "The Great Harvest," "The Biter Bit" and "Tank Patrol," new British Ministry of Information films, and by courtesy of the U. S. War Department, "Know Your Ally Britain," for an invited audience. . . . That same afternoon, 4:30 to 6, Ginny Simms, motion picture actress and celebrated singer, is being feted at the Willard by Carter T. Barron, Eastern Division Manager of Loew's, Inc. . . . Victor Orsinger, once of the Little Theater, writes Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller that he ran across Dick Coe, our former right arm, in North Africa and learned that his newest stint for "Stars and Stripes" is a column called, "Spotlight on the U. S." . . . Dick's V-Christmas cards, incidentally, have arrived in town. . . . Always thoughtful, that lad.

LEONARD LYONS

Times Square Tattle

New York, Dec. 12.—Capt. Sigfrid Ericcson, commander of the Gripsholm, visited the Stork Club recently. He revealed that when the Japanese had disembarked, for the exchange of internees, "a physical check-up" resulted in the discovery that two Japanese had failed to leave the ship. They were found hiding in a closet downstairs. They were 8-year-old girls, born in America, who did not wish to live in Japan . . . Throughout the trip, all the Japanese youngsters were given instruction in Japanese language, politics and culture . . . In referring to the condition of the Americans he has brought back from Germany, Italy and Japan, Capt. Ericcson uses the word 'Rags." And in referring to the condition of the Axis nationals from America, he uses the word "Riches."

DIANA BARRYMORE

Raymond Massey was interviewed by two high school students who arrived wearing zoot suits. The star could not restrain his stares, and the boys tried to explain to him why each item of their unique apparel was the thing required by a man who wishes to be described as well-dressed. "I'm sorry, but I think you look funny," Massey told them . . . When the interview was over, and the boys were leaving, Massey repeated: "I still think you look funny." . . . One of the zoot-suiters left the room, and quickly returned. "WE'RE dressed funny?" he said. "Take a look at the guy waiting in the hall." Massey looked. It was Lucius Beebe.

Another internal OPA fight is in the New York office, where one top official soon will quit . . . Diana Barrymore, who returned from Hollywood, expects to appear in Emilyn Williams' new play, in which for almost three acts, she will play the role of a young man. . . . Moss Hart's "Golden Era" literally is finished. All the publicized gold garters, cuff-links, suspenders, cigarette cases, pens, pencils, etc., which he accumulated in the prewar days, and which are irreplacable, were stolen from his apartment on Tuesday night.

The venerable Duchess of Sutherland is proud of her autograph-album, which bears the inscriptions of a few Kings, Prime Ministers, a President, etc. The first signature in the book is that of "Nicholas," Czar of Russia . . . The Duchess is telling of the time she invited Madame Litvinoff to her New York home, and asked her to sign the album. She offered, for a signature, the page bearing the late Czar's autograph. In parentheses, next to his name, the Duchess had written "Murdered—1919" . . . "Ivy Litvinoff, ready to sign, noticed the writing on the page," says the Duchess. "She said: 'Are you asking me to sign the check?'"

'The Mikado' Has a Conference, Too!

FLORENZ AMES AND ROBERT PITKIN

In the usual direction, as Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, and the ruler of the title role, respectively, in "The Mikado," which last night inaugurated the two-week engagement of the Boston Comic Opera Company at the National Theater. A repertoire of nine Gilbert and Sullivan operettas will be presented during the run of R. H. Burnside's splendid organization

'The Mikado' Opens National's Fortnight of Savoyard Operas

By Nelson B. Bell

"The Mikado," the Savoyard operetta that occasioned such groundless trepidation two years ago, when the company made its first Washington appearance shortly after Pearl Harbor, last night again demonstrated its unfailing popularity, as the opening bill of the Boston Comic Opera Company's two-week engagement at the National Theater.

Almost an "international incident" when first sung in London more than a half-century ago, this imperishable, old wheelhorse of the singing societies, from lowliest amateur to most skilled professional, has long since outlived racial prejudice and stands as a revered and eagerly applauded model of satirical humor and enduring beauty of score.

It was acted and sung last evening in perfect mood and admirable tempo by a cast that has achieved the ultima thule of a vastly satisfying ensemble balance that subordinates individual eminence to "all-star" quality.

Silences the Skeptics

In its third season, the company assembled by R. H. Burnside has attained the smoothness and splendid coordination usually associated with the British D'Oyly Carte Company, in the musical field, and the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin, in the dramatic. They have completely undone the skeptics who two years ago were sure it couldn't be done.

The current presentation of "The Mikado"—it will be repeated Saturday night of this week and at Sunday matinee and both matinee and night performances on Wednesday and Saturday of next week—is effectively costumed and picturesquely staged, without attempt at spectacular grandeur. It is played and sung in fine spirit with unobtrusive accent on every laugh in the lines and every pointed barb in the lyrics.

Florenz Ames, Robert Pitkin, Robert Eckles and Bertram Peacock continue the mainstays of the comedy, as Ko-Ko, the Emperor of Japan, Pooh-Bah and Pish Tush. Each has developed his role into a complete and rounded character Mr. Ames and Mr. Pitkin are virtually "show stoppers" in everything they do, and Mr. Eckles' Pooh-Bah is, for once, expressive of all the humorous and literate pomposity the role is intended to embody. Mr. Peacock, within the limits of lesser opportunities, is equally valuable.

Lovers Well Sung

Yum-Yum and Nanki-Poo are attractively and tunefully eloquent young lovers, whose soprano and tenor are made to rejuvenate some of the loveliest songs in the score by Kathleen Roche and Allen Stewart. Mary Lundon and Marie Valdez complete the "The Three Little Maids," and Katisha is made the disturbing element she is supposed to be by Catherine Judah, whose "menace" is a sympathetic as well as resonant one.

The chorus, while not of great numerical strength, still is of sufficient vocal power to produce cathedral effects when and where needed.

Tonight's treat for lovers of Gilbert and Sullivan will be the double bill of "Trial by Jury," one act curtain-raiser, and "Pinafore."

'Horror' Plus at Pix

A macabre twosome is on the screen of the Pix Theater this week, with "The Son of Dracula" and "The Mad Ghoul" vying far grimness.

One deals with a vampire, the other with a ghoul, and neither has a happy ending. Nobody, it seems, can win against the machinations of such old hands at blood-sucking and grave-desecration as the veteran horrifiers, Lon Chaney, jr., and George Zucco, the respective villains of the two pieces.

Beside Chaney, Robert Paige, Louise Albritton and Evelyn Ankers are featured in "Son of Dracula." "The Mad Ghoul" stars Miss Ankers and David Bruce, with Zucco and Turhan Bey. The latter film offers an innovation in corpse operas—Miss Ankers sings three songs, "All for Love," "Our Love Will Live" and "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls."

History in the News

The items of prime interest in the news section of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, of course, are the first detailed views of the Cairo and Teheran conference, participated in by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, Chiang Kai-shek, and Marshal Stalin. They are unusually complete and illuminating.

The capture of Tarawa by the Marines, the docking of the Gripsholm at New York, Gary Cooper entertaining on the front line in New Guinea, sports events and whatnot give the news reports wide diversity.

"Youth in Crisis," the March of Time's symposium on juvenile delinquency, its causes and possible remedies, leads the short subjects, which also include "Chief Nealy Reports to the Nation"—on the progress of the WAVES—"A-1 Dogs," and "Good Night Rusty," a cartoon.

R. A. Ford Rites To Be Held Tomorrow

Richard A. Ford, 79, of 1625 K st. nw., lawyer and editor of the Washington Law Reporter, died at Emergency Hospital Saturday afternoon after he was stricken with a heart attack at his office in the Commonwealth Building.

Born in Montgomery, Ala., Mr. Ford spent his early life in Charleston and Greenville, S. C. He came to Washington in 1891, studied law at Columbian College, now George Washington University, and was admitted to the bar in 1893. He was named editor of the Washington Law Reporter that year, a position he has held ever since. In the early days of radio, he became local counsel for the Marconi Telegraph Co. of America, and was named to act in a similar capacity upon the formation of the Radio Corp. of America.

He is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Marie Ramey of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Naomi Winter of Columbia, S. C., and two nephews, Thomas McPherson of Columbia, S. C., and Henry R. McPherson of College Park, Ga.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 1 p. m. at All Souls' Church and burial will be at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Charles W. Moore

Charles W. Moore of 1405 Buchanan st. nw., noted vocalist and soloist in Protestant churches in Washington for many years, died at his home yesterday at the age of 78.

A native of Howard County, Md., Mr. Moore moved to Washington more than 50 years ago and was employed as a salesman in a downtown department store when he retired two years ago.

During his singing career, he served as soloist at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church for five years, at the Foundry Methodist Church for 11 years, at the Calvary Baptist Church for two years and at the First Baptist Church for seven years. He was a frequent soloist at Masonic affairs.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna M. Moore, and a son, Howard, who is with the U. S. Navy.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw., with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Harry J. Overman

Funeral services for Harry James Overman, sr., last surviving brother of former Senator Lee Slater Overman of North Carolina, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Hines Co. funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Salisbury, N. C., his home town.

Mr. Overman, 82, died Saturday at the home of his son, Charles B. Overman, 101 South Park dr., Arlington, Va.

Since coming to Washington in 1911, he had served in the secretary of the Senate's office, with the Commerce Department and with the rehabilitation division of the Veterans' Administration. Also surviving are three other sons, Marion M. and Harry J. Overman, jr., both of the Washington area, and Francis B. Overman of Freeport, Tex.

A Real Opportunity for Women Who Want to Help With the War Effort

The War Manpower Commission stated: "War work is more than work in a factory. The woman who waits on trade in a grocery store is doing an important war job. She is helping to keep war production going by helping war production workers stay on the job."

Consider These Attractive Benefits:

1. No experience necessary.
2. Two weeks training at full salary.
3. Opportunity for advancement.
4. Work near your home.
5. Pleasant working conditions.
6. Opportunity to secure Group Life Insurance, Hospitalization and Sick Benefits at a very low cost.
7. No Sunday or holiday work.
8. Convenient working hours.

WOMEN NEEDED

For Work in Food Stores

Starting Salary $24.80

For Six 8-Hour Days

A Real Opportunity for Women Who Want to Help With the War Effort

The War Manpower Commission stated: "War work is more than work in a factory. The woman who waits on trade in a grocery store is doing an important war job. She is helping to keep war production going by helping war production workers stay on the job."

Consider These Attractive Benefits:

1. No experience necessary.
2. Two weeks training at full salary.
3. Opportunity for advancement.
4. Work near your home.
5. Pleasant working conditions.
6. Opportunity to secure Group Life Insurance, Hospitalization and Sick Benefits at a very low cost.
7. No Sunday or holiday work.
8. Convenient working hours.

DONALD DUCK — By Walt Disney

Copr., 1943, Walt Disney Productions—World Rights Reserved.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES 'He Jests at Scars That Never Felt a Wound' — By Milton Caniff

DID YOU SEE THAT? FLIGHT LIEUTENANT BONNY GOT ONE JAP —AND COLONEL CORKIN THE OTHER...
AND IN THE WELL-KNOWN NICK, AT THAT, TERRY
WITH A LITTLE LUCK WE'LL BE HOME SOON... HOW DID WE MAKE OUT?
SOME OF THE PEOPLE ARE IN A BAD WAY— BUT THEY'RE ALL ON BOARD
WE CAN RADIO AHEAD FOR AMBULANCES... GRETT SAYS—HEY! WHERE IS GRETT?

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

IN QUIET ELM CITY, MARY WORTH HAS GIVEN SHELTER TO GYPSY ROMEL, A DANCER WHO HAS FLED FROM NEW YORK AFTER AN UNSOLVED ROBBERY AT THE TERRACE GARDEN NIGHT CLUB!
PART OF GYPSY'S SECRET HAS BEEN LEARNED BY MAX FALCON, LOCAL BACHELOR, WHO USES THE THREAT OF EXPOSURE TO FORCE HIS ATTENTIONS UPON HER!
DURING A BLACKOUT, A LIKEABLE YOUNG STRANGER AND MAX HAVE QUARRELED PUBLICLY OVER GYPSY ...AND THE GOSSIP GRAPEVINE HAS CAUSED HER TO BE ROUNDLY SNUBBED
COME IN, BUD! I WAS JUST TELLING MISS MONEZ WHAT A WONDERFUL STAR YOU'D MAKE FOR THE WAR CHEST REVUE!
TO WIN THE TOWN'S FRIENDSHIP, GYPSY HAS OFFERED TO DIRECT A BENEFIT SHOW! CALLING ON THE CHAIRMAN, MRS. SHERIDAN PENDRAKE, SHE MEETS THE LATTER'S SON.... THE BOY WHO HAD CROSSED SWORDS OVER HER WITH FALCON!

MICKEY FINN — Last Minute Instructions! — By Lank Leonard

UNCLE OWNEY SETS THE STAGE FOR THE FINAL ACT OF "PHIL FINN, THE LUCKY BOOKIE."
NOW EACH OF THESE NAMES THAT I'VE PRINTED ON THESE CARDS, IS THE NAME OF A HORSE THAT WILL BE RUNNING IN THE FIRST RACE TOMORROW!
AT 3:45 THE RESULTS OF THAT FIRST RACE WILL BE BROADCAST!—YOU'LL BE LISTENING AT THIS RADIO FOR THE NAME OF THE HORSE THAT WINS—THEN ALL YOU'VE GOT TO DO IS PICK OUT THE CARD THAT HAS THAT NAME ON IT—AND HOLD IT UP TO THE WINDOW SO I CAN SEE IT FROM THE FACTORY!
YAS SUH!

MR. AND MRS. — One Woman to Another — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

JOE!
SEE WHAT THE LABEL IS ON THAT WOMAN'S COAT IN BACK OF YOU
WHAT FOR?
SHE TOSSED IT OVER A CHAIR. THERE'S A LABEL ON THE COLLAR BUT I CAN'T READ IT FROM HERE
SHE MAY LEAVE BEFORE WE DO AND I WANT TO SEE WHERE SHE GOT IT S'MATTER?
DO YOU WANT A COAT LIKE IT, OR IS IT TOO MUCH LIKE THE ONE YOU'VE GOT?

OF COURSE YOU'VE MET MISS DUGAN
NOT SOCIALLY
SHE'S MY SECRETARY AND COMPANION
CHARMING COMPANION FOR SUCH A CHARMING LADY—MY SON, STEPHEN
A GALLANT LAD FOR A GALLANT MOTHER

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

MOM THOUGHT YOU'D LIKE TO HAVE A COOKIE, WHILE THEY'RE NICE AND HOT!
WELL THANKS!
YOU'RE WELCOME, SIR!
DID MYRTLE SAY SIR TO ME?
CERTAINLY! WILL YOU HAVE ANOTHER COOKIE?
ONLY TEN MORE SHOPPING DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS!
OH, SO THAT'S IT?
PRIVATE MYRTLE REPORTING! OUR BRIDGE-HEAD HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED!

JOE PALOOKA — The Mob — By Ham Fisher

I SAYS—GIMME BACK EVERYTHING—BUT THEY STARTED CALLIN' ME NAMES AN' ONE BIG ONE COME FER ME—
CRASH
GIT A POOL CUE?
TH' BIG CLOWN—NOW HE'LL GIT IT!!
I SURE WAS LUCKY—BECAUSE I DIDN'T KNOW THE FIRST THING ABOUT FIGHT—I—UH—WAS JUST BIG AN' STRONG—WHEW!
HE SAYS HE DIDN'T KNOW HOW TO FIGHT.
SHUT UP—GO ON, JOE.

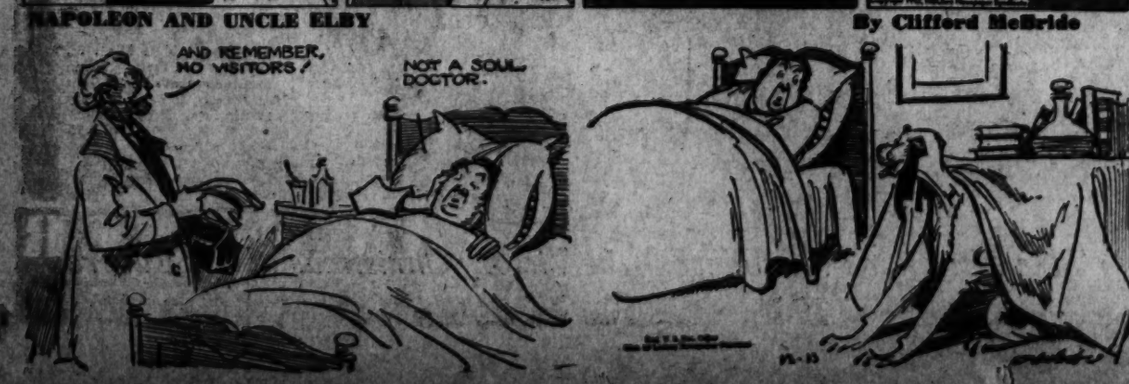
JANE ARDEN — Threats — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

YOU'RE WASTING YOUR TIME!
AND NOW, HERR SVENSON, I WANT THE NAMES OF YOUR UNDERGROUND AGENTS IN NORWAY—SHNELL!
SO? OBSERVE THESE PLIERS—MOST USEFUL IN REMOVING FINGERNAILS, EH? THAT'S ONE WAY OF LOOSENING YOUR TONGUE!
I DON'T SCARE EASILY—I KNOW YOU NAZIS AND YOUR METHODS!
LOOSEN ONE OF HIS HANDS—I'LL TEACH THIS FOOL A LESSON!
JA, HERR BRINKER—HE'LL CHANGE HIS TUNE QUICKLY ENOUGH!

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

EVEN IN HER DREAMS, LOIS LANE'S IMPISH NIECE, SUSIE, CONTINUES TO BE OBSESSED BY THE NOTION THAT MEEK REPORTER CLARK KENT IS SUPERMAN!
DON'T JUMP, SUSIE, PLEASE.
AND SHE'S RISKING HER DREAM LIFE TO PROVE IT.
DON'T ARGUE WITH ME, UNCLE CLARK—YOU KNOW YOU'LL HAVE TO CATCH ME!
BUT SUSIE, I TELL YOU I'M NOT SUPERMAN!
TELL THAT TO SUPERMAN—YOU'RE NOT FOOLING ME!
HE—HE DIDN'T CATCH ME! THAT MEANS HE ISN'T—
IONIZE
HUH? ... AHHH... IT'S JUST AN OLD DREAM! ... SO I DON'T HAVE TO CHANGE MY MIND YET ABOUT UNCLE CLARK!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



WINNIE WINKLE — Easy Money — By Brauner

YEP! WAHOO HEAP FAGGED OUT, STEVE!
A ROOM FOR TWO? THAT WILL BE SO FRANCS—IN ADVANCE, NATURALLY!
HERE YOU ARE!
PERHAPS ONE GOT CAUGHT IN THE RAIN—?
PERHAPS, M'SIEU! BUT ONE HEARS OF A RUBBER BOAT FOUND BY A BEACH PATROL NEAR HERE! ONE DOES NOT CARE TO TAKE RISKS! I HAVE NO ROOM FOR YOU!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

IT CAN'T BE! I CAN'T BELIEVE IT! IT SEEMS LIKE YESTERDAY THAT WE LEFT HIM!
SKIPPER, YOU'RE PALE AS A GHOST! WHAT HAPPENED?
O-OH-JUST GIVE ME A MINUTE! ASK CHEN TO BRING ME SOME WATER.
DON HAS RECOVERED FROM HIS SHOCK AS HE SAYS. THE COMMANDANT'S OFFICE PHONES THAT QUENTIN JONES IS MISSING AND THE U.S.S. JUNEAU IS LOST!
QUENTIN WAS A GRAND BOY AND A SPLENDID OFFICER—WAR TAKES THE BEST WE HAVE, BUT IT'S THE BEST WE NEED TO WIN FINAL VICTORY!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zane Grey

NOW, MRS. STIPTIK, THE NEXT QUESTION IS BLA-A-A- BLAA BLA-BLA-
